'Observer' Sees Worm In Big Apple

By FRANK RUTTER

Times Washington Bureau
NEW YORK — Strolling down Fifth Avenue recently, a professional social worker and astute observer of the human condition remarked upon a new phenomenon.

"Just look at how many people you see on the street talking to themselves," he said.

He was right. And indeed New Yorkers have got something to talk to themselves about.

They are muttering about the worm in the Big Apple. Fun City is now Fear City.

The bumpy pavements aren't lined with gold. They are potholed with lack of it.

The city is caught in its biggest jam, at the height of the tourist season, a financial crisis of frightening magnitude.

The frightening part includes proposed layoffs in the police and fire departments, prompting the controversial campaign by the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association to distribute "Fear City" handbills to tourists and citizens.

The fact that there are also "benevolent associations" for sergeants, lieutenants and captains indicates the proliferation and scope of public service unions with which the city is dealing.

The day that the social worker was visiting New York, the school crossing guards were picketing city hall because all 2,300 of these smart, blue-and-white uniformed young women are to be laid off, leaving the entire school population on its wits to play tag with traffic.

Thousands of Dismissals

Mayor Abraham Beame has announced dismissal of 9,269 city employees by the end of June and a cut-off of funds for agencies employing another 19,746.

Originally he promised to dump more than 51,000 city workers by the end of the month, but he is still dicker- ing daily with the state legislature, city council and financial sources for additional funds, having got the big brush from Washington.

The creation of a state-appointed financing authority, known as Big Mac, to convert city debt from short to long-term, is only a summer breather for beleaguered Beame. Come October, the city will need to borrow again to keep its $13-billion budget alive.

There is much irony in the sudden falling of the crisis on Beame, elected mayor only two years ago after a career of managing the city's books, starting as assistant budget director in 1946, and rising to comptroller in 1962.

Many cities are faced with similar financial problems but no other city is like New York.

Its streets are kept remarkably clean by a sanitation department better paid than many teachers. Its welfare benefits are so extensive that 21 per cent of the women claiming them pretend they are deserted wives. Its university is free. Many recreational and cultural pursuits are free. Its 35-cent bus system is excellent.

On the other hand, it gets half the eight-per-cent state sales tax, plus varying shares of stock transfer, corporate income, bank, commuter, business, bond sale, and other taxes.

The problem is how to maintain services that are unprecedented on a tax base that is already broad, with little prospect of additional sources from state and federal governments.

Accounting Rules Were Bent

One solution is to slash the services to the knuckle. Unsympathetic Conservatives are in fact almost relishing the collapse of what they see as the ultimate in permissive liberalism; the haughty elite getting comeuppance.

But New York, and the people who pay taxes, cast votes, and receive services, is more than Manhattan, cultural capital of the nation. It is also Queens, The Bronx, Harlem.

And there is another problem: the way in which city budgets have been administered for years, spending revenues never received. Borrowing on credit that never materialized, transferring accounts to the next year, defying the uniform system of Accounting for Cities laid down by the state legislature.

No wonder the people are talking to themselves.

The social worker, one David Barrett, premier of British Columbia, left New York, dismayed by the pressures and perils of the American way of megalife, and concerned that such problems should not flow north of the border.

And yet, it is an amazing city and its citizens are strikingly resourceful. On the day before the social worker left for another troubled city, London, which has managed to survive a lot longer, there was an unpredictable, torrential rainstorm in Manhattan, dumping half an inch of rain on shoppers in just the first 10 minutes.

Just as suddenly the streets sprouted assorted cheery vendors bearing arms full of umbrellas.

New York isn't defeated yet.

TOWN SLICES LOAVES ... TO A DIME EACH

LYNNWOOD, Wash. (AP) — The lure of a 10-cent loaf of bread turned some stores into consumer battlefields as hundreds of shoppers stormed the bakery aisles in this city's week-long bread war.

It all began Monday when one large store reduced the price for three loaves to 96 from 99 cents.

Six stores were soon involved in price-slashing. Prices dropped almost hourly Tuesday, and by Wednesday bread sold for 10 cents a loaf. It held at that price Thursday.

Many stores could not stack bread on the shelf as fast as customers snatched it up.

One store which ran out of bread gave customers who purchased $10 worth of groceries 20 cents to buy bread at other stores.

"It's ridiculous; nobody gains anything and we're all losing our shirts," said one store manager.

Store owner Jim Spaulding said that by noon Thursday he had lost $6,000 on bread.

Customers were limited to two loaves, but Mark Cyphers, who came from Seattle, 20 miles to the south, made repeated rounds of all six stores, purchasing 50 loaves.

He said he bought most of them for friends.

SOGGY CAMPERS and most regular residents were forced to flee from Waterton Lakes National Park in Alberta because of flooding. Jim Calder was one of the last to move out of the townsite, now swamped by water from heavy rains and fast-melting mountain snowpacks. Hundreds more were chased out by similar conditions across the U.S.-Canadian border in Montana.

INFERNO SPARES DRIVER

TORONTO — Police said a stolen car was pulling from pursuing cruisers at 110 miles an hour on the western section of Eglinton Avenue when it went out of control and hit a power pole.

These things happened: ● The rear half of the car was sheared off and the gas tank exploded, damaging a passing car and setting fire to two store fronts.

● The front half ran on for two blocks before it hit a light standard.

● Burning gasoline turned the street into a sheet of flame for a few minutes.

Levi Backs $15,000 Pharmacare Spending

The department of human resources spent $15,000 on a campaign to inform Pharmacare recipients that benefits would not be cut back because of the department's $103 million over-run.

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi defended the expenditure in the legislature Thursday saying $15,000 spent to ease the minds of recipients of a $20 million program is totally acceptable.

Largely because of press reports following the department's announcement of the over-run, Levi said, many people were anxious that the Pharmacare program would be interrupted.

The 231,000 senior citizens had to be told this was not the case, Levi said in answer to questions by Liberal leader David Anderson.

The human resources department was swamped with letters from senior citizens, so it was decided that a letter should be included in Pharmacare cheque payments.

Anderson called the letter, sent out in April, "political flackery from the department designed to promote the NDP."

The letter said: "Dear Friend: we are taking this means to assure you that we fully intend to continue with Pharmacare."

"In recent months many of you have expressed your concern to us over the future of

$1M LOOT FOUND

BAIE COMEAU, Que. (CP) — Quebec Provincial Police said today they believe they have recovered $1.06 million stolen Thursday from a Bank Canadian National branch near here.

A QPP spokesman said police officers had found two large money bags taken by three armed men in the robbery at the Manic 3 hydroelectric dam site, 50 miles north of here.

The police spokesman said the money bags were found with the aid of tracking dogs alongside a road about 15 miles from the dam site.

Police believe the men escaped by helicopter or hydroplane after they abandoned their get-away car and they said if this was the case, it would be difficult to locate them because of the dense forests in the area.

NEWS BRIEFS

YOUNG WARNS U.S. TRAVEL CLUB

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young today issued a warning that a Seattle-based travel club will have to pay its debts to residents in B.C. before it will be allowed to establish another operation.

"The operators of Aircub (International) Inc. would be well advised, in fact, to keep out of British Columbia," Young said.

Reject Queen's Plea

NAIROBI (Reuter) — Ugandan President Idi Amin, apparently rejecting an appeal for clemency from Queen Elizabeth, said today British lecturer Denis Hills will be executed by a firing squad for treason next Monday. Radio Uganda, monitored in this capital of Kenya, quotes President Amin as saying that the only thing which can save Hills is a visit to Uganda by British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan by the end of this week.

Amassador Ousted

KINSHASA (AP) — The Zaire government has ordered the United States ambassador, Dean Hinton, to leave the country and also is reported hampering efforts to reach two American students and a young Dutch woman held by guerrillas in the eastern part of the country. The expulsion order came in the wake of charges in government-controlled newspapers that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency conspired with six high-ranking army officers to overthrow President Mobutu Sese Seko.

LABERGE SENTENCE: 3 YEARS

JOLIETTE, Que. (CP) — Louis Laberge, president of the 300,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor, was sentenced today to three years in prison for criminal mischief in connection with an outbreak of vandalism at a factory in 1974.

Laberge had been found guilty by a Quebec Superior Court jury of nine men and three women May 30 of inciting workers to sabotage appliances at Hupp Canada Ltd. in nearby L'Assomption, Que., during a wage dispute.

Handing down the sentence today, Superior Court Justice Marcel Nichols said he had decided on a prison term to set an example in light of the violence that has marked labor disputes in the province.

Laberge is free on bail pending an appeal initiated following his conviction. The charge against Laberge arose from vandalism that caused $50,000 worth of damage to appliances at the Hupp Canada plant after the labor leader had addressed company workers at a meeting on May 29, 1974.

Hostage 'Got Hysterical And Started to Cry'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mary Steinhauser, 32, shot to death when 14 fellow hostages ended a 41-hour siege by three convicts at British Columbia Penitentiary, apparently realized the uprising was planned.

Evidence given Thursday at the Farris inquiry into the siege, disclosed that Miss Steinhauser appeared to be "getting a bit hysterical and started to cry" two hours before she was killed.

She was the most closely guarded of the 15 hostages, all of them penitentiary employees. Penitentiary officials thought they had halted the uprising at 11 p.m. June 10, but two hours later Miss Steinhauser was killed when guards stormed the siege area in the penitentiary grounds after the hostages turned on their knife-wielding captors.

The federal inquiry, headed by Mr. Justice John L. Farris of the British Columbia Court of Appeal, was adjourned Monday to allow counsel for some of the hostages to prepare himself.

A transcript of a final briefing and policy meeting held by prison officials and negotiators was presented Thursday, along with previous recorded sessions.

Douglas McGregor, assistant Pacific region director of the Canadian Penitentiary Service, said at the final meeting:

"Mary for one appears to be getting a bit hysterical and started to cry and caused enough concern that (Al) Hadjivick (a prison official observing the hostage area) thought that she might not be prepared to go along with the others and might even put the kiwatch (kiwash) on if something got started. The decision was to stop them from doing anything foolish on their own or get something started in there. It could start a blood bath."

In response to that statement, penitentiary director Dragan Cernetic commented, according to the transcript:

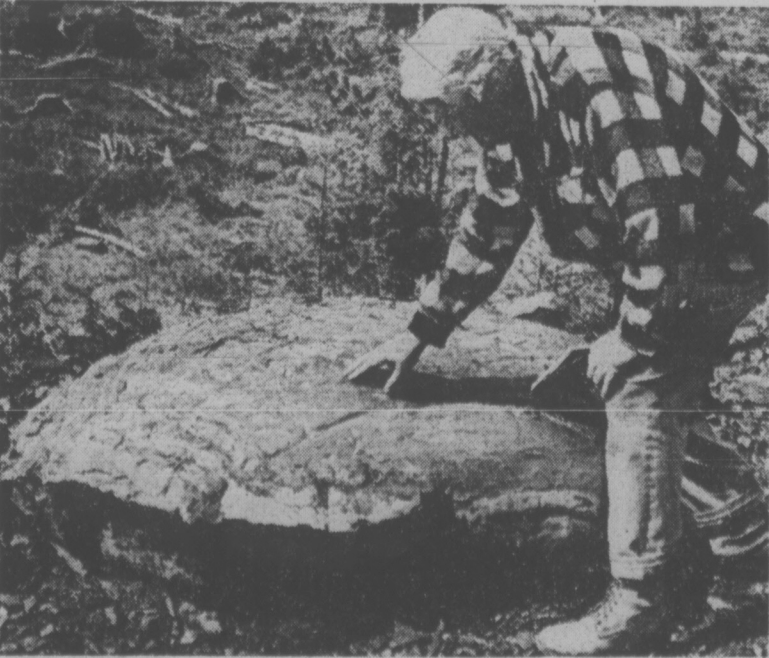

"In fact the alternatives were quite explicitly stated. If action is taken by the hostages within the walls then we would have to move; we have no damn choice. But we are not to start any action."

Mr. McGregor answered: "Well they seem to be taking voluntarily far too much nollard and other tranquillizers, which is rather peculiar behavior of the hostages in some respects and I guess it's because of the increased tension."

The transcript also quotes Mr. Cernetic telling the policy meeting on the last night of the siege that "if injuries or death occurs we will go in without mercy; otherwise we negotiate."

Two of the prisoners, Andrew Bruce, 26, seriously wounded in the shooting and Claire Wilson, 26, made phone calls the last night from the siege area, and made identical statements:

"Either we are dead tomorrow or we are not."

CUPE Accepts Pact Amid Some Grumbling

THIS INSURANCE PLAN COULD MAKE WAVES...

WINNIPEG (CP) — Swingers of Manitoba, take heart.

Don't despair when that waterbed bursts, dumping a ton of water on the apartment downstairs.

Don't sell the stereo and sports car to pay off those fist-avenging tenants downstairs and the irate owner of the block.

Instead, take it up with the insurance agent.

The Manitoba, Public Insurance Corp., the Crown corporation that runs Autopac, has announced plans to help meet just such a damply depressing situation.

Waterbed insurance, which may some day be known as Waterpac, was one of many topics discussed Thursday at a seminar of Manitoba insurance agents.

The seminar drew about 800 agents from across Manitoba to learn about the forms of general insurance which the corporation plans to offer effective July 2.

The question of waterbeds arose when an insurance agent wanted to know whether the corporation's new home insurance package would be extended to include them.

The seminar was told waterbed insurance now is hard, if not impossible, to get.

Ray Ballan, a corporation manager who looks after personal lines of liability-type coverage, said waterbed coverage will be available once endorsement aspects are cleared up.

He said when a waterbed bursts, it can be a costly matter replacing "the ceiling of the apartment below, and maybe the one below that."

Ballan said the corporation would not likely write an insurance policy to cover only the waterbed, but would offer it as part of a package deal, covering other furniture and possessions in the apartment.

Members of the Saanich local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees voted Thursday night to ratify an agreement with municipality, but the vote was close because of conditions attached to the contract, a union spokesman said today.

Jim Brett, president of the 375-member local which had earlier rejected the contract offered on a regional basis, said some of the members felt "quite emotional about the conditions" and this resulted in the 141-109 vote in favor of the contract.

The two conditions which Saanich officials attached to their proposals were that the local drop a charge now pending before the Labor Relations Board and that it take no disciplinary action against some of its members.

Brett said the LRB charge dealt with the definition of a contract clause concerning coverage during the period of time after a previous contract has expired but before a new one is accepted.

Brett said the local had been planning disciplinary action against about eight of its members who "were approached to do things like picket duty during the strike and refused and who saw fit not to support the local."

Brett said many of the Saanich members felt that an agreement to drop internal action against these members would violate the constitution, "but we had to put this before the membership as part of the whole package and the package was accepted."

Additions in the new Saanich contract include the changes in severance pay, job classification and some working conditions.

Another revision in the contract allows inside workers at the top of the salary scale to pare down their demands and allow those in the middle of the wage scale to draw higher salaries.

The Saanich agreement leaves only the Esquimalt CUPE local without a contract in the region.

Negotiations in Esquimalt will not start before a ruling on a charge now being considered by the LRB. The ruling may be handed down next week.

SAM GIANCANA, a reputed leader in the Chicago crime syndicate recently linked to alleged Central Intelligence Agency plots to kill Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, was found shot to death in his home Thursday night. Giancana, 65, had been shot once in the right corner of the mouth and five times in the neck. No weapon was found.

Indira Appeal Plea

NEW DELHI (WP) — While India's powerful Congress party parades thousands of people through the streets of New Delhi today in support of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, her lawyers are to ask the Supreme Court to hold a special session to hear her appeal against a lower court judgment that found her guilty of corrupt election practices.

The demonstration may mass as many as 100,000 people from states surrounding the capital. Party officials and state governments are rounding up villagers and bringing them into the city in hundreds of trucks and buses.

The demonstration will start with a march through New Delhi streets beginning at Mrs. Gandhi's home.

At about the same time, her lawyers will be meeting in the Supreme Court building with Justice V. R. Krishna Iyer, the vacation judge in charge of the court during the current summer holiday, according to sources in the prime minister's secretariat.

The lawyers are expected to ask Iyer to hold a special session next Monday to receive their appeal against the lower court decision announced in Mrs. Gandhi's home town of Allahabad last Thursday.

The attorneys will also ask

Iyer to stay the Allahabad court's judgment, which bars Mrs. Gandhi from political office for six years.

The Allahabad judgment resulted from a case filed against Mrs. Gandhi by the man she defeated overwhelmingly in the 1971 parliamentary election, socialist Raj Narain.

NEW RED MISSILES

WASHINGTON (AP)

Russia has started deploying three powerful new intercontinental ballistic missiles, two of them with multiple warheads, U.S. Defence Secretary James Schlesinger said today.

Schlesinger's report at a news conference indicated significant progress in new Soviet missile deployments since last January.

U.S. Doctors Soften Position on Strikes

ATLANTIC CITY (WP) — The American Medical Association, following the advice of its lawyers, Thursday withdrew its strong support of organized walkouts by doctors.

AMA delegates made two significant changes today in its resolution on doctors' strikes — an emotional issue that has split organized medicine since doctors in California and New York staged walkouts last month and this month to protest soaring malpractice insurance rates.

First the doctors deleted the word strike from the title of an earlier resolution because delegates insisted that a doctor withholding medical care is not on strike.

Again on the advice of their lawyers, the doctors extended the degree of care they would provide patients during a walkout. Earlier they limited it to "emergency and urgently needed medical care," but Thursday they expanded it by saying doctors would not "jeopardize the medical care of their patients."

In both Tuesday's and Thursday's actions, the AMA said each doctor has an "inalienable right" to decide "the circumstances on which he can and cannot continue to practice his profession."

The following persons are to contact the nearest RCMP detachment for an urgent personal message:

with their demand to be taken to a foreign country, were: Cuba, Algeria, Venezuela, "one of the Irelands," Jamaica and Uganda.

The penitentiary transcript also showed a plan was set up to post sharpshooters with rifles at key points in and outside the prison in case an opportunity arose to shoot any of the three prisoners in any transfer.

Mr. Cernetic, the transcript showed, gave this plan a 50-50 chance of succeeding.

Mr. Hadvick learned of the hostages' plans when he got close enough to one of them after the prisoners had relaxed, probably due to excessive drug consumption.

But the plan was vetoed and Mr. Hadvick relayed a coded message to the hostages to call off any uprising attempt.

Steps were taken to settle down for the night, with only essential staff kept on.

Then at about 1 a.m., Cernetic said, "We heard (from the prison administration boardroom) screaming come from the yard area."

"A male scream, very loud. At this point we all jumped to look through and we all heard within seconds a volley of shots fired, as well as some screaming coming from the vault area."

Minutes later, the uprising was over. Bruce was injured and Miss Steinhauser was killed.

the weather

Showers lingered over southern interior regions overnight with isolated thunderstorms. Elsewhere, skies were mainly clear with patches of low cloud and fog along the coastal regions. A large low pressure system extending westward from Ontario will continue to dominate the general circulation pattern over eastern sections of B.C. today while a weak Pacific disturbance begins to move towards the north coast. Sunny skies are expected in most interior regions today with increasing cloudiness over the coastal sections that will spread slowly to the south coast by Saturday morning. Early morning clouds over the south coast today will break up this afternoon.

SAAB

Fourteen virtues that make the extraordinary car from Sweden the perfect car for Canada.

- Roll-over protection. Steel beams wrap up over doors and roof. Saab is a passionate advocate of safety.
- Nylon velour upholstery. Luxurious, plush, hard-wearing, easily cleaned. Never burning hot or icy cold.
- Low wind noise. Wind-tunnel tests produced wedge-shaped body. Air flows smoothly over and under the body, past curved windshield and side windows.
- Powerful, fast. Single-overhead cam, fuel-injected engine. 115 h.p., 0-60, 10.7 secs.; 108 m.p.h.*
- Foils rust. Lift hood, look behind headlights and fenders. See why snow and salt can't pack in. And Saabs are rustproofed at the factory.
- Bumpers repair themselves. Honeycomb core of reformable plastic resumes original shape after collision. Lightweight, cheap to fix.
- Disc brakes all 'round. Self-adjusting, power-assisted and huge (380 sq. in. friction area).
- Front-wheel drive. No ordinary car can carve through bends, bull its way through snow, or grip on ice like the Saab.
- Beats deep snow. Big 15-inch wheels, steel-belted Michelin radials, 6 1/4-inch ground clearance, smooth underbody — and front wheel drive — combine to beat deep snow.
- Heated driver's seat. In cold weather, heating element in driver's seat switches on automatically, warms up derriere.
- Custom-fit seat. Driver's seat can be raised or lowered horizontally, or tilted to give high front for knee support. Backrest infinitely adjustable.
- Rear window defroster. Copious blasts of hot air keep window fog and frost-free.
- Rear seat folds down. A Saab will take anything from skis to Aunt Martha's floor lamps.
- Unusually generous leg, shoulder and head room in rear.
- Lots of space.

SAAB has all this and much more. Come see. Come drive.

Labor Code Changes Answer to Complaints

Labor Minister Bill King said today he will introduce changes to the provincial government's new Labor Code legislation next week which "may or may not" appease the protests of the B.C. Federation of Labor.

New amendments to the legislation, he said, will likely be introduced Monday before the legislation is debated by the house.

The labor minister declined to indicate the nature of the changes, but his announcement follows strong complaints by the labor federation which were also echoed by the Victoria Labor Council.

The council sent a telegram to King Wednesday afternoon saying it supports the stand of the federation which opposes the legislation and has asked King to withdraw the Labor Code of B.C. Amendments Act.

The legislation was discussed at the federation's convention a week ago and was criticized for the tremendous added power it gives the Labor Relations Board.

One of the amendments prohibits a union from asking for disciplinary action against a member who joins another trade union within the same plant.

Victoria Labor Council spokesman John Schibill says the measure opens the door to an open-shop policy in the province, where new employees would not have to join whatever union was certified in the plant.

PHONE STALLED RESCUE

A delay in ambulance response to a fatal crash in Colwood early Tuesday was caused by a change in telephone numbers and an oversight in posting new ones in the provincial emergency ambulance dispatch office.

Emergency service director Dr. Peter Ransford said records show the total time elapsed between receipt of the call for aid and arrival of the ambulance at the accident was 17 minutes.

That included a five-minute delay when the dispatcher was unable to reach Langford fire hall because of the change in numbers, and instead dispatched an ambulance from the Burnside station on the Victoria-Saanich boundary, Ransford said.

He suggested 17 minutes was "not bad" for an ambulance to get to the site at Goldstream and Hartsdale under the circumstances.

Langford volunteer ambulance changed over to a new telephone number with construction of a new fire hall. Ransford said the new number was posted on all but one telephone in the emergency dispatch office and the night dispatcher on duty early Tuesday had not been told of the change.

When he tried to reach Langford fire hall, he was using the telephone with the old number, Ransford said.

"This was our fault," he said.

In the legislature Thursday Health Minister Dennis Cooke said an investigation of the situation was being made. He was responding to a question by Liberal leader David Anderson who said the accident victim waited 20 minutes for the ambulance to arrive.

The accident involved a car driven by Duane Allan Ramsey, 25, of 396-A Lancholme, Colwood, which hit an embankment, rolled and threw Ramsey out at about 1:45 a.m. The car apparently rolled over the driver before coming to rest.

Ramsey was taken to Victoria General Hospital but was dead on arrival.

In the legislature, Conservative leader Scott Wallace told Cooke there is another aspect of the Langford ambulance service that can produce delays.

He said the attendants on duty there are not allowed to respond to direct calls to the fire hall until they report to the central dispatch centre.

Langford fire chief Allan Le Quesne said the RCMP had been ordered not to request ambulance aid directly to the fire hall, which is only a few feet away from the police station.

The chief said telephone delays can be frustrating, but once connections are made there is normally no more than seven minutes required to have an ambulance on the scene anywhere in the Langford district. He said complaints of delay often are exaggerated and do not take into account telephone connections.

Langford fire hall has the same emergency telephone number, but the number used by the ambulance dispatch service is new.

Ransford said when the system is fully changed over to the new fire hall there will be a direct hotline from the dispatcher to the fire hall.

Le Quesne said he is also concerned about the fact that ambulance attendants dispatched to the outlying areas from the city may be only vaguely familiar with streets in Colwood or Langford.

He said he has had difficulty communicating his view that provincial ambulance service attendants should rotate duties in all areas to familiarize themselves with each. At present they serve only briefly in different areas and become really familiar with only one or two, Le Quesne complained.

The Langford volunteer ambulance and the provincial government service are integrated on a 24-hour basis.

Cooke told the legislature the provincial service had been "tremendously well accepted," but noted difficulties are expected in any new undertaking.

Stomach Operation To Remove Foot Wart

PARIS (AP) — A Paris court today awarded damages of $2,750 in a malpractice suit involving a doctor who started a stomach operation on a 12-year-old girl due to have a wart removed from the sole of her foot.

The court ruled the surgeon and the private clinic in which the operation took place were to pay half the award each because the girl was brought into the operating theatre under a general anesthetic instead of another 12-year-old girl due to have a hernia operation.

The doctor opened the stomach wall before realizing the error, then sewed it up and went on to remove the wart.

The court ruled he should have verified the identity of the patient before starting to operate, but also that the clinic was responsible for presenting the correct patient in the theatre.

The court did not reveal the award was for the girl's suffering and the other $2,000 for the esthetic disfigurement caused by the stomach scar.

$17,500 For French Program

The federal government will provide $17,500 for a new Grade 7 conversational French program scheduled to start in September in Saanich School District schools.

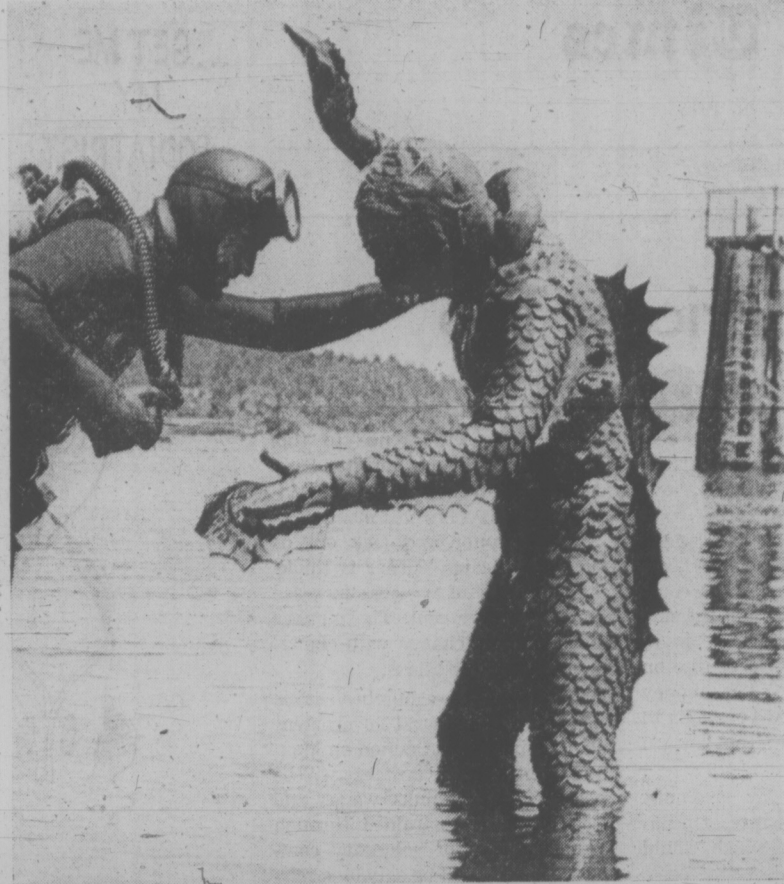

The project is one of eight French-language programs in British Columbia which will get money from the language program of the department of secretary of state.

The Saanich program is to introduce conversational French at Grade 7 during the 1975-76 school year, then expand the program down one grade each succeeding year until all elementary pupils are receiving instruction.

Also funded will be Greater Victoria School District's French immersion and bilingual programs, which also received federal funding a year ago.

This year's grant will be $27,450 which will allow extension of the programs to include two Grade 2 classes.

The program now includes a bilingual kindergarten and Grade 1 class at Cloverdale elementary, and an immersion kindergarten and Grade 1 class at Richmond.

ESQUIMALT HARBOR will have its own Loch Ness monster again Saturday, courtesy of the fleet diving unit, when the Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt, opens the dockyard to the public from 1 to 5 p.m. for Armed Forces Day. A full program of events has been scheduled and a shuttlecock bus service organized to take visitors to and from large parking lots outside the dockyard gates.

The Sons of Scotland Benevolent Association, Camp Balgownie No. 204, will meet tonight at 8 at Norway House, 1110 Hillside Ave., for a business meeting, dinner and dance.

The Victoria Progressive Conservative Women's Association will hold a coffee party Wednesday, June 25, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the residence of Mrs. H. W. Gladwell, 1770 Rockland Ave.

Homes Sought

Central Saanich council has had a preliminary presentation from a development company which wants to build a community of 850 to 900 homes on 200 acres east of Tod Inlet.

But Mayor Jean Butler said today the proposal has never come formally before council and it is too soon for an indication of how aldermen and the public will respond to it.

The company is BANC Development Corp., a subsidiary of a Winnipeg firm, Genstar, and the land involved runs from Tod Inlet alongside Butchart Gardens east almost to the West Saanich Road and from Benvenuto south to the boundary of Saanich.

The land is hilly with some rock and is not in the agricultural land reserve. It is now zoned partly commercial, partly recreational and partly rural and if the project were to go ahead, it would be done under a land-use contract. The company envisages a mix of housing, from single family dwellings to condominiums and other multiple family structures, accommodating a population of 2,700 to 3,000.

Plans also call for park areas and preserving some of the steeper land in its natural state, as well as for dyking the upper end of Tod Inlet and building a 150-berth marina together with other commercial and recreational facilities.

Council has yet to instruct its development officer on the project but the plans will likely go to consultants for their opinion.

BCGEU PACT SIGNED

Provincial government professional employees have voted 95 per cent in favor of accepting their first master contract negotiated with the provincial government.

The contract was signed by government and union officials late this morning.

The master agreement covering about 900 members of the Professional Employees Association, gives the members a fringe benefit scheme equal to 11 per cent of their salaries.

A union spokesman said the master contract established an "optional selection of benefits" plan which allows the members an 11 per cent credit and leaves it up to them what they want to use it for: educational leaves, additional holidays, retirement plans and a range of other options.

The master agreement, which took 13 months to negotiate, covers all working conditions and fringe benefits.

Must Control Prices, Too

Whatever the federal budget contains Monday night, it will not be good news for labor. Finance Minister John Turner has given clear notice the federal government will take steps to restrain wage increases to keep Canadian goods competitive on the world market.

How he plans to control pay increases remains Turner's secret. But the evidence is strong that Canada will soon be faced with some version of the Weintraub plan.

Sidney Weintraub is an economist at the University of Pennsylvania who for several years has advocated a form of wage control using the income and corporation tax weapon.

Under his scheme, a limit to pay increases would be announced in advance. He suggests five per cent. If a company granted a pay increase of 15 per cent to its employees, the company would face a corporation tax surcharge on the 10 per cent.

Workers would also face an income tax surcharge on the 10 per cent. As a result, workers would not gain financially from any increase over five per cent and a corporation would face severe economic hardship if it signed a contract allowing for anything above five per cent.

In Canada, Ruben Bellan of the studies at St. John's College, University of Manitoba, has come up with his own version of the surcharge plan. Bellan's idea is to apply an income tax surcharge on any wage increase. The money raised would go to corporations to enable them to hold the line on prices.

Bellan argues, for example, that if the Canadian rate of inflation is 16 per cent, which would have the effect of raising the price of a $1 item to $1.16, the federal treasury would pay a subsidy of 16 cents per item sold to enable the company to continue to charge only $1.

Turner undoubtedly has his own plan which will differ with both schemes. But it seems clear he is thinking in terms of using the government's taxation power to meet the government's number one target: keeping Canadian wages in line with those paid in the United States. Every recent speech of Turner makes reference to this problem and Prime Minister Trudeau has also made the topic central to his speeches this month.

A well-publicized leak out of Ottawa indicates Turner is thinking in terms of a wage increase limit of 12 per cent. The number obviously will change with changing economic conditions.

Whatever the number, it is clear that the federal government plans some form of action on Monday night. The government will be mistaken if it thinks wages and prices can be restrained through some program of voluntary compliance and it will be equally a mistake to try to spread some form of rigid wage and price control blanket over the Canadian economy.

If it chooses to use its only feasible weapon, the taxation power, it will raise the righteous indignation of labor if its policy is designed to restrain wages without, in turn, controlling prices. Any unilateral action against labor would be folly on both economic and political grounds.

Ham on Wry

A government-owned sandwich bar on the Inner Harbor bracketed by an arts and craft boutique. Is this the denouement of years of agonizing over intelligent development of the Inner Harbor? Is this the last recourse of exhausted NDP minds? Sam Bawlf's art deco shrine heralding a mere sandwich bar is an insult to everything that was good in the 1930s. When it comes to aesthetics the provincial government exhibits the sophistication of King Kong.

Just imagine those hot summer days. Tourists in Panama hats carrying the latest plastic tote bags crouching in the shade of our art deco tower as the egg salad oozes out of their sandwiches onto the causeway. Better to have the Reid centre than long lines of congealed mayonnaise or crusts of bread littering Victoria's focal point. The city fathers have apparently not even been consulted on the proposed tacky features.

Plenty of restaurants and boutiques line Government Street. To suggest such redundancy in the Inner Harbor is more prosaic than ham on rye. In the first place the provincial government should get together with the city and figure out an acceptable alternative, a teaser for the provincial museum perhaps, a public art gallery, anything but a sandwich bar.

Failing mutual agreement or imaginative suggestions, and we can't negate that possibility considering the two levels of government involved, the area should be cleared and left to nice green grass. Sam Bawlf could have his tower and government officials could argue on the grass until they came up with an idea. While the grass would probably exhibit more growth than official imaginations, the scene would at least provide an amusing insight into B.C. life.

RICHARD GWYN

Money Troubles on Campus

OTTAWA — Imagine yourself in the place of this manager. He has to economize, and drastically so. He has 1,050 employees. Fire some? But most hold job security by contract. Rely on attrition then, which means not filling posts as they fall vacant and so is painless? But of those 1,050 employees, just 25 will reach retirement age over the next 10 years.

The manager is Ian MacDonald, the new president of York University and before that the number one civil servant in Ontario government and before that a professor of economics at the University of Toronto, from 1955 to 1965 during what he now remembers as "the best years to be at a university."

York's problems are pretty much the same as those of every university in the country. Its revenues this year will increase by 11.6 per cent while its expenses will jump 13 to 15 per cent.

There are, of course, other ways to economize. Support staff, such as secretaries, have been cut. So has maintenance, which means that one day there'll be higher bills for roofs that leak and for elevators that get stuck between floors.

Youth and Tenure

The heart of a university and of its budget, though, is its teaching staff. Tenure and the youthful age of the professors, most of them hired during the heady expansion years of the 1960s give MacDonald, like all university presidents, almost no room to manoeuvre at the same time as he has never needed manoeuvring room more.

The post-secondary job market shifts almost from year to year. Doctors, for example, are in over-supply, at least in the large cities. Oceanographers are in hot demand. To cope, universities should be able to cut some courses and to expand others.

Universities are under political and public pressure to reduce the number of foreign-born professors on their staffs. Universities are under equal pressure to find jobs for the nearly 40,000 post-graduate students that pour out of the campuses each year, most of them trained only to teach or to do research, yet universities, less and less, can provide employment for the products of their own system.

All these specific demands, for relevance and for efficiency, are happening at the same time that higher education itself is in a state of deep malaise. "An increasingly farcical waste of public money and human talent," in the opinion of James Daley, a history professor at McMaster University in Hamilton, Ont.

We are training, often, the wrong people for the wrong jobs. "Many students who have attended and who are attending university do not belong there," concluded the Graham royal commission in Nova Scotia. Between now and 1985, twice as many students will earn degrees and post-secondary diplomas of all kinds as the number of jobs which will require those qualifications.

money woes universal at universities

Few universities are engaged in their own communities. Memorial University of Newfoundland, through its extension work, is the striking exception. Concordia in Montreal, Carleton in Ottawa, York and the University of Victoria have a less dramatic, but fairly worthy record.

In most instances, town and gown never have been further apart. A specific example. The federal New Start project in Kent County, New Brunswick, a depressed rural region, has been engaged in some highly innovative social science research as well as in extensive community development. The universities of New Brunswick and of Moncton were invited to take part in the research. Both declined, although the work was on their own doorstep.

All of this is happening although our $11 billion a year bill for education, from elementary to post-secondary, which is easily the highest in the world, now accounts for one out of every five tax dollars collected by governments.

MacDonald's managerial problems at York illustrate the core of the problem. Change is being demanded of institutions which, of their very nature, are incapable of rapid change.

MacDonald's solution is a national conference on higher education, organized by the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. He hopes it can be held early in 1976.

Not Far Enough

The idea is a good one, but it doesn't go far enough. Any national conference is bound to be a fairly pompous affair. Far more effective, and creative, would be conferences held by each of the 66 universities in their own communities. Memorial, typically, already has held one.

Provided the setting is right, many of the comments made at these meetings by citizens, businessmen, unionists, will be brutal and downright embarrassing to the reputation of universities. So be it. The alternatives are isolation and irrelevance.

Universities used to like to think of themselves as "a community of scholars," an old concept now being abandoned by the professors themselves as they form into unions to protect their jobs. The need today is for the direct reverse — scholarship for communities. Universities cannot bring about this change. Only the public can, if it is given the opportunity to say what it wants — to educate its own universities in fact.

Talking of Rights

I feel encouraged that Saanich council is disturbed by the number of developers who switch plans once their rezoning applications are approved. I hope that stricter control can be enforced through land-use contracts.

I was one of the residents who attended the public hearing re the five-unit townhouse project on 1005 Falmouth, and although I did not speak out against the development I was in agreement and in sympathy with those who did.

I did look at the plans, which showed an attractive development, and I did ask questions and made a number of statements at that time. The difficulty in drainage of this area was mentioned and the possibility of changes in design. In both instances I was assured that problems would not arise.

This in itself was not enough to discourage my speaking against the project but I had become extremely frustrated listening to others who had protested before, either on this issue or another, when I discovered that although council gave the impression of listening to these citizens, they really were not. I remember one of the aldermen remarking to the effect that housing developments, traffic and unsafe conditions were things we all had to learn to live with.

But what these citizens were really talking about were their rights as human beings to expect certain conditions of living for a healthy life, physically and mentally. These citizens were fighting for the right of mankind to his environment and the ecology of this environment.

I am sure they went home disappointed and frustrated to be put down and not listened to, by the men who were supposed to be looking after these rights. I know I did. — Shurly Mazerolle, 3830 Saul Street.

Stop the Presses

After having listened to John Turner read attributed statements in the various news statements attributed to the various publications for quite some time, I am now pretty well convinced that he is in the unfortunate position of holding the office of minister of finance, charged with the responsibility of managing (spending) the national revenue, giving us all a so-called budget and last but not least, keeping inflation under control.

I am sad indeed to say that he is not anywhere near the mark.

Just for an opener, I hear him making statements blaming the high rate of inflation on excessive wage demands and profit levels by various sectors of our national economy. Are MPs included in that group? Thirty-three and one-third per cent to me anyway seems excessive, and I can assure him I did not even come anywhere near that figure in any wage increase given to me and I do not enjoy any tax-free allowances either.

At the same time, I read various reports stating that Turner, through his instrument, the Bank of Canada, has increased the money supply by a whopping 12 per cent in one year. He sets up our budget, he spends what the government collects, and he knows how much there is in the till to be spent. Yet he finds it necessary to overspend far in excess of what comes in, and he pays for it by letting the printing presses run just a little longer until enough paper with fancy ink on it has appeared, making it possible for our national government to spend it all. And he has the guts to stand there and blame the high rate of inflation on unions and profiteers and higher and higher wage demands? Please answer me just one question, Mr. Turner. How on God's earth can anyone make any wage demand stick or any higher prices for any goods and services, if the cash that is to pay for those wages and services is not already available? Please answer me that one.

If the money (which he and his banking system has already made available for federal spending) were not in circulation, any higher wage demand and price could only be achieved by either unemployment for someone else or going out of business for another.

I am thoroughly convinced that he cannot in his own mind differentiate between cause and effect when he analyzes inflation. If he is honest, and I would like to think he is, and he continues to blame inflation on unions, etc., then I can only say one thing. Either he is ignorant of the true reasons for inflation, or he should check his feet, for I think his shoes are screwed on backwards. Someone ought to turn him around and make him face the real direction in which to look for causes in inflation.

It is the government's printing of paper money over and above its stock of real money (i.e. gold) that is the cause of inflation, higher wages and prices are nothing more than the effect of inflation, not the cause.

I also read news reports that he has ruled out any devaluation of the Canadian dollar. That is good. No need for us to devolve. The markets of the world are doing that for us. Every time he prints some more, he in effect makes the dollars already outstanding worth that much less, unless there is a corresponding increase in goods and services produced. At present, our gross national product is quite stagnant, probably at zero growth rate after discounting inflation, yet the money supply will continue to increase to fight inflation and get the economy "going again."

I do not belong to any union, I am employed, and I dare say to Mr. Turner, stop the damn printing presses and face the music before it is too late, before you will have completely destroyed our currency, the blood of our economy. In God's name, stop, and if that brings on a depression, as it most certainly will, then so be it. But stop now, while there is still a chance for rebuilding. Do not lead us into most certain destruction by completely destroying our currency through runaway inflation, for then we will not even have a medium of exchange. We will then have nothing left with which to rebuild. You see, Mr. Turner, government is the only institution that can manage to take a useful commodity like paper, slap some ink on it, and make it totally worthless.

I am very much aware that asking the government to cure inflation is like asking the disease to provide the cure, but I implore Mr. Turner — stop the presses, now. If he doesn't God help us all. — Roger F. Dhur, 4095 Raymond Street.

Physical Education

I attended the excellent physical education conference June 12-14 at the University of Victoria. I was very impressed with the organization and programming. The steering committee should be complimented for their superb job.

The content included in the sessions will enable our teachers to do a better job of educating our youth physically.

One session stands out. This was in the area of fitness in elementary schools. I was very interested to see that the fitness of our children seems to go down at age 11, but with daily PE, this trend can be reversed. The Prince George experiment showed a 47 per cent improvement over a regular control class. This experiment also showed that the students still did well in their academics. I hope this information becomes available to our department of education. — Victor E. Lindal, Provincial Coach, B.C. Volleyball Association.

Protestant Issue Too

One important fact in this abortion issue should be noted.

On Jan. 27, a press conference was held in Toronto by 12 leading Protestant clergymen from denominations containing 95 per cent of Canadian Protestants, some of whom were speaking as representatives of their church.

During the press conference the clergy made clear that the Protestant community views abortion as a moral issue, not just a medical one. They went on to say that they fully supported Justice Minister Otto Lang's enforcement of the abortion law and urged a strict interpretation of health. They were dismayed by the way in which the law is being distorted by some therapeutic abortion committees.

The myth that abortion is only a Catholic issue so angered these leading Protestants that they felt they must publicly declare the true situation. — Victoria resident.

Good Neighbors

In regard to the fire June 10 at the Lions Lodge for senior citizens, I would like to thank publicly the fire departments of Esquimalt, the defence department and View Royal who worked so diligently to rescue those who were trapped in their rooms.

A special thanks to the neighbors on Fleming Street who brought tea and coffee to us, also the staff of Silver Threads main centre, Esquimalt and Saanich, also the Salvation Army who served us sandwiches for lunch in our lounge and last but not least, our courageous caretakers who worked so hard to get us out of the building. God bless them all.

Thank God my apartment was not damaged, but was saved by the fire doors. My deepest sympathy to the family of the late Mr. D. Smith who succumbed to smoke inhalation. Thank you everyone. — Mrs. W. H. Kensington, 408-574 Fleming Street.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of June 20, 1915.

With the advent of warm weather the ice cream man is to be seen vending his products on the streets and making his rounds on Sunday as on other days. Following their action of last year, the police commissioners decided that Sunday sale of ice cream would not be permitted and on May 30 the names of two men were taken by police. In each case, the offence of which they stood self-confessed was the sale of five cents' worth of the cooling article on the Lord's Day. Joseph Ross, who accent denoted that he came from Quebec, admitted selling the ice cream cone in question on Sunday, but couldn't see any harm in it. "I do not make more than 50 or 75 cents a day during the week and on Sundays a little more," Ross said he had eight children and a wife to support. A fine of 50 cents was imposed by Magistrate Jay.

The Open-Mouth Tradition of the Silent Service

By JAMES EAYRS

HALIFAX — On the promontory of Point Pleasant Park where the North West Arm meets the harbor, yards from a stand of pines from the branches of which skeletons of pirates were left to hang as warning to any errant mariners putting out to sea, is a granite monument whose plaque bears the following inscription:

IN ADVERSITY, NEITHER POLITICS, LACK OF MONEY, NOR RIDICULE COULD BEAT THE DETERMINATION AND COURAGE OF THIS OFFICER.

The monument was erected in 1967 by the officers and men of the Royal Canadian Navy and the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve, and its date invites the strong suspicion that its unusual tribute was intended not only for its subject but for that recently retired stormy petrel of the controversy surrounding the unification of the armed forces, Rear Admiral William Landymore.

It is, however, the name of another rear admiral which appears upon the plaque—that of Walter Hose, father of the Royal Canadian Navy, founder of the naval reserve, first chief of the naval staff, who was born (at sea, appropriately enough) one hundred years ago on October 2, 1875.

The adversity of Admiral Hose was not personal, it was political. His was the misfortune to be in charge of the Royal Canadian Navy at the nadir of its history—during the depths of the Great Depression.

Casting about for ways to slash the budget, the Bennett government fell eagerly upon the naval estimates. For the fiscal year 1933-34—so Treasury Board recommended—"the maintenance of the Ships and Establishments of the Naval Service should be conducted on the sum of $422,000."

Admiral Hose was told, in effect, to put his little fleet into mothballs for the duration. In fact, it was worse than that. As the Navy's estimates had previously been set at $2,422,000, the sum left to it was not enough to pay off the men.

Hose refused to go along. The recommendation, he wrote in a barrage of protesting memoranda, "creates

an absolutely impossible position for the Chief of the Naval Staff and indicates a lack of confidence by the Government in him as a responsible officer to tender advice on national defence." He would sooner resign than preside over a navy tied up at the jetty. "Any further reductions beyond what I had carefully worked out," the Chief of the Naval Staff told the minister of finance and other cabinet members in a crucial confrontation,

"were bound to result in such inefficiency and such demoralization of the personnel that there was bound to be disaster; that if I continued to hold office and to draw my salary I should still be responsible for the good order and proper conduct of the service and could not evade my share, and a big share, of condemnation for accepting a situation which I had realized would result in the collapse of discipline and morale and probably danger to life."

The admiral's passionate appeal, joined to apprehension at the political consequences of his resigning to take his case to the Canadian people, caused the cabinet to change its mind. Most of the Navy's funds were restored. Canada would have a navy, after all. Hose had won his battle—and by winning his battle would help to win the Battle of the Atlantic and possibly the Second World War.

With that war won and over, the Navy once again entered the doldrums. And once again its Chief of Naval Staff raised his voice in protest—this time not in the privacy of a cabinet meeting but at a public meeting.

"The United States Navy," declared Vice Admiral Howard ("Rastus") Reid on November 6, 1946, "plans a post-war personnel of 500,000 men. We have 10,000. Our population is one-twelfth that of the United States. You can figure out for yourself the arithmetic."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, to whose attention these observations were swiftly brought, was not at all interested in the admiral's arithmetic. He was incensed by the impropriety of the admiral's utterance. At a cabinet meeting on November 15, Mackenzie King instructed his minister of National Defence for Naval Services to reprimand his Chief of Naval Staff. The minister replied somewhat smugly that the reprimand had already been administered. (Mackenzie King ran a tight ship.)

Now another naval nabob has blown his stack. Vice Admiral Douglas Boyle (sometimes referred to as "Festering," but only behind his back), chief of Maritime Command, has surpassed in locusty and in the range of his public comment any of his talkative predecessors. Like Vice Admiral Reid before him, Vice Admiral Boyle offered a disparaging comparison between the American defence effort and our own. "Every time I go down to the States I hang my head in shame," Admiral Boyle told a rapt audience of Tory MPs in Halifax some days ago. "We spend just over 2 per cent of our gross national product on defence. They spend 7.8 per cent."

The number of such cases is becoming statistically significant—Hose, Reid, Landymore and now Boyle. What is it about the silent service that produces loud-mouthed admirals?

There are several reasons for this paradox.

Of all the armed forces, the navy is the most capital intensive. Its ships if few are costly. For the officer in charge of them to see his billion dollars' worth of vessels tied up at the wall for want of funds to sail them is more than distressing, it is galling.

Of all the armed forces, the navy runs the highest risks for operational inefficiency. "I mentioned the skill and practice required in manoeuvring destroyers in close order and at high speed"—so Admiral Hose sought to impress upon his political masters, and with reason. Stall a tank, and nobody is hurt, prang a plane and two crew members—six at most—are killed. But to collide at sea is to place at risk the lives of hundreds, with court martial and disgrace to live with ever after, as well as the sense of guilt.

Of all the armed forces, the navy leads the loneliest life. At sea for weeks on end, in cramped quarters and isolated from the society which it is their mission to protect, its officers have only too much time in which to nurse grievances and brood. Keeping their own company in wardroom or officers' club, they feed on a mutual conviction that their fellow-countrymen don't understand them, don't appreciate them, don't realize their sacrifice of what counterparts on civvie-street have come to take for granted—the job from 9 to 5, the cocoon of family life, the weekends at the cottage. Resentment swells into neurosis, and there comes a breaking-point.

Finally, of all the armed forces, the navy instils a sense of mission, and the mission is command. The naval outlook is elitist, its tradition is superiority. "The English Leader-at-Sea," writes an historian of the Royal Navy, "by whatever name he was called, was almost invariably a gentleman, usually a nobleman, often a soldier, sometimes sufficiently adaptable to convert himself into a reasonable seaman, but practically never a seaman by profession... The chief command at sea must be held by 'blue blood', with sea experience if possible, but without it if necessary." The Royal Navy is not the Royal Canadian Navy, still less Maritime Command. But some of its naval ethic has rubbed off on our own, and stayed there.

All this may not excuse Admiral Boyle's outburst, but goes far to explain it. And I think to excuse it, too.

The Grand Style Of Our Great Men

By DOUGLAS FISHER

"I don't really make a distinction," said Trudeau. "I do it in the most efficient way."

This enveloping explanation of his use of government facilities such as the helicopters for what were partisan purposes indicates that the prime minister feels that either no distinction can be made between the partisan and the non-partisan work of a prime minister or that it is too petty or difficult to make one.

Over the explanation and the consistent attitude of the minister and his staff since 1968, hovers a rhetorical question: Who would make minor or base distinctions about one who holds the crushing burdens of the highest office in the land? An implicit, added distinction is that the electors have and will again have their chance to approve or disapprove. That is, such imperial conduct has been confirmed in three successive general elections.

I first noted one broad justification of such conduct and explanations years ago with Donald Gordon, then president of the CNR, and Hal Banks, then president of the SIU.

Evidence was presented before a House committee in the early 1960s that various services and employees of the CNR had been used without any charge to the president to improve and brighten his summer home. Purchasing agents and experts of the railway had collaborated with Gordon in purchasing decorations and houseware. A bulldozer had been dropped off at a siding to be used in landscaping.

I had presented the evidence to the committee and had raised the question of whether such use was ethical. Gordon was blunt in response. He was president of the CNR 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, whether at his cottage or at Place Ville Marie, or anywhere. Therefore, all the resources of his corporation should be available and usable to sustain him in his onerous chores.

The majority of the committee was satisfied with this explanation. Much of the press comment indicated that a great man was being persecuted by petty spirits.

The justification was that a man at the apex of grand responsibilities must have something like seigniorial rights. Hal Banks as SIU chieftain behaved and spent in flamboyant fashion. His expense accounts were enormous and literally unchecked. He holidayed in grand style, his expenses and those of his mistresses were paid out of union funds. He drove a massive, white Cadillac. His entertainments for those on his own level in union affairs and politics were Rabelaisian. Justice Norris in his SIU inquiry picked apart much of this behavior and spending as improper or illegal. After his report and as the government moved to install a trusteeship, the SIU mounted a major lobby campaign, its centerpiece a march on Ottawa.

As something like 1,800 SIU members milled around the environs of Parliament, I spent several hours in the crowd talking to seamen. From every man with whom I raised the issue of Banks' excessive spending and total use of his authority as president, I got an approving, not a critical response. They wanted their chief to have the perquisites and symbols of a tycoon. What use was a leader if he could not be absolute?

In the usual prospect, every incumbent politician is both a partisan and interested in his re-election. How does an MP distinguish between using his constituency office or the expensive "tied" telephone lines provided by tax funds to service his constituents and to sustain his party organization?

The difference between a constituency office clerk used to monitor and improve party membership and the use of helicopters, etc., to whisk the prime minister to party functions is one of degree, not of kind.

The paradox, as I sense it, is that the mass of people will be much more critical of MPs for less than strict observance of the division between the public and the partisan than they will be with the prime minister.

I see from indications that the voice of the people would sustain the Trudeau attitude that it is unnecessary to separate and to account for the difference between public and partisan functions. There is small evidence of general concern about other big advantages that lie with the prime minister, in contrast to opposition politicians.

Perhaps the most used and valuable partisan asset he has is the appointments to the Senate. There's the prerogative to claim time on national television to address the nation. There's the blanket of ministerial responsibility and thus secrecy over the immense and talented public service, plus all its information services.

By the time the Trudeau government is ousted at the polls the grandiose pattern for the office will be entrenched. It will be the certain model for successors. The style and the image in force is presidential, almost monarchical, even though the system is a parliamentary one.

CORPORATE 'DONATIONS' UNWELCOME

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

A U.S. Senate committee is unfolding a shabby story about some American corporations operating in foreign countries paying bribes to government officials in the form of "political contributions." Gulf Oil, for example, admits having paid $5 million in secret contributions in South Korea, Bolivia, Lebanon and Italy.

Some American corporations contribute to party funds in Canada. Arne Nielsen, president of Mobil Oil Canada Ltd., readily confirms evidence given in Washington that his company has made "modest" contributions to Liberals and Conservatives at federal and provincial levels.

It doesn't follow that contributions in Canada are bribes intended to corrupt the political process. A corporation which finds it necessary to pay bribes in one country may act entirely legally where conditions are different. There is no reason to doubt Nielsen's claim that Mobil has acted within Canadian law.

But circumstances do prompt the question of why corporations, foreign or Canadian, do in fact contribute to political funds. They are not philanthropic organizations and must expect some benefit for their money.

One benefit was implied by Nielsen when he said Mobil contributes to parties "which support the private enterprise system." This does not include the New Democratic Party. Mobil, in other words, hopes to help keep in power governments which will allow it to continue to do business in Canada, and it hopes to keep out a party which might put it out of business.

Many corporations no doubt contribute for similar reasons. Very few, probably, hope to pay specific favors, although many fear they will suffer government disfavor if they fail to contribute.

... confirms contributions

On the other side of the political equation, it is likely one of the motives of trade unions in contributing to the NDP is to balance the influence of corporations in the democratic process.

None of this is illegal, but neither is it particularly desirable. When large sums of money are flowing into the party coffers, there is always the danger of corruption—or of the appearance of corruption which undermines public confidence in the political process.

There is also reason to doubt whether shareholders, if given the opportunity, would approve of their money being paid by corporate managers to parties they may not support.

Parties are a necessary part of the democratic process and they need money to maintain their organizations, conduct political education and participate in elections. But they don't have to spend as much as they do now on lavish, multi-million dollar, mind-bending campaigns at election time.

Under the new election expenses law, candidates are to receive a subsidy from the state and parties are to be guaranteed free TV time. In addition, there is now a tax concession encouraging private citizens to contribute to the party of their choice.

This should be enough for our parties. Let us therefore remove any doubt or suspicion by following the example of the United States and banning corporate contributions to political parties.

Big Day at Big Creek

BIG CREEK — The Big Creek annual rodeo last Saturday was attended by about 350 people, a few dozen horses and cows, one mule and some mosquitoes which had not been gentled. A splendid time was had by all.

When you think of rodeos, think first of the Calgary Stampede, then of Williams Lake and Cloverdale and then of the Anahim Lake Stampede. Keep thinking smaller and smaller until, with the list practically exhausted, you will reach the Big Creek event.

The rodeo ground is a portion of a grass meadow called The Big Flat, near Mons Lake, rough-unpeeled logs for rails, one small announcer's stand and four side-delivery bucking chutes with cranky board doors.

There are no bleachers. You sit on the rails, lifting your feet and maybe falling off when a saddle-bronc kicks too close.

There is a concession stand where a paper plate filled with baked beans, potato salad and ham costs $1.50. For those who don't wish to clutter up their stomachs with food, the bring-your-own bottle bar service operates on the seats of the 110-odd campers and cars and under the shade of the nearby jackpines.

Everything is volunteer and thoroughly unprofessional. People in Big Creek would feel alarmed if it were

Motorcycle Threat On Proposed Bikeways

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Protection of proposed Capital Region bikeways from motorcycle and minibike encroachment will be among foremost considerations of planners, Saanich Ald. Joe Bourque said Thursday.

The alderman is campaigning to have designated routes set aside for the use of bicyclists and preliminary study of the concept is under way through technical staff of the Capital Regional District.

Bourque said it had been decided on the basis of experience elsewhere that any conflict of interest between cyclists and motorists was a "matter of proper policing."

Saanich traffic officer Sgt. Bill Chisholm, who is a member of the exploratory committee, advocates a strict ban on motor-driven vehicles for any bikeway, and that anyone operating a motorcycle or minibike should be required to hold a licence attesting to competence and responsible age.

The latter would follow if any operator of a motorized vehicle were required to hold a driver's licence, and to keep them off bikeways, there would have to be legislation requiring motorcycles and minibikes to be driven only on roads, Chisholm suggested.

He said what would be desirable would be separate areas for both bicycling and trail-biking.

The officer said the safety of pedestrians and cyclists would be a first consideration and that enforcement of the law on bikeways would have to be strict.

Bourque said the informal study of bikeways has already drawn on the experience of many other areas where special routes and rights of way have been set up for the cycling public.

The first of these dates back to about 1958 in the U.S. Midwest and among the places with established bikeways are Boston, Chicago, Ottawa, Calgary, Seattle and Davis, Calif.

The alderman realizes "the minibike seems to find its way on to these trails, but it's a problem I'd love to deal with."

He said he would favor segregation, public education and self-policing by cyclists.

Bourque also said that where construction of a route is required it be done in such a way as to discourage motorcyclists.

In Davis, for example, planners deliberately curved the bikeway every 200 or 300 feet to prevent users from "building up a head of steam."

In Seattle, planners and users of the bikeway are "delighted," having discovered only minor problems, Bourque said.

Municipal representatives and regional planners met

Thursday in preliminary discussion of the bikeway concept, mainly to generate ideas of a general nature. Later, said Bourque, there could be a politically-oriented committee to launch a bikeway program.

Meanwhile, Chisholm agrees the affluence of families creates problems with respect to both bicycling and motorbiking.

Many youngsters own both a 10-speed bike and a minibike, and some of tender years are producing a marked increase in the number of accidents and serious injuries such as spine and skull fractures, permanent knee disabilities and amputations.

He urges parents who allow their children to have minibikes in particular should make sure they have been properly trained and operate the machines in a safe place.

Any child under 16 must ride motorized machines on private property — provided he can get permission from the property owner — because anyone operating on a road must be 16 or more to have a driver's licence.

Police are not able to control the use of motorbikes on private property, but they are aware that youngsters will try to ride on residential streets or other public property "where they can get away with it."

'SECOND RATE PARKING LOT'

Cars parked in front of the Legislative Building are "seriously impairing the esthetic quality" of the historic buildings, an Independent MLA said Thursday.

Garde Gardom (Vancouver-Point Grey) told the legislature he was going to ask Public Works Minister Bill Hartley a "nice question" and then badgered the minister about the ugly appearance of cars in front of the Buildings.

F. M. Rattenbury, architect of the buildings, "never thought this place would be a second rate parking lot," he said.

Ministers have special parking spaces outside the buildings and two-hour public parking as allowed along the front driveway.

Gardom said the minister should make a move now to upgrade the appearance of the building and he asked MLAs who support parking in the front to raise their hands. There were no hands raised.

Development Plan Studied

About 60 Esquimalt ratepayers attended an information meeting Wednesday night to hear why the municipality has suggested their properties be included in a development area for higher-density construction.

No decision has been made on future use of the site, but development is being considered after some residents requested they be allowed to rebuild on their properties, Esquimalt engineer Mac Campbell said Thursday.

The area — eight acres of residential land with 2½ living units per acre — is bounded by Lamson, Old Esquimalt, Devonshire and the western boundary of lots on Porter.

The land is now zoned R-2 and nothing more dense than duplexes can be built unless it is declared a development area or rezoned, said Ald. Larry Mann.

"The feeling of council is that, no R-2 land will be used until all R-3 land (in the municipality) is developed," he said.

Planning committee members will discuss the issue.

Hydro Workers 'Greedy'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Greedy workers and subsidized buses have driven electric power rates artificially high, says the former

If you are interested in trading your property in for a house and acreage see our classified under 253, Country Homes and Acreage.
B.C. Land and Ins. Ltd.

chairman of British Columbia Hydro.

Gordon Shrum told members of Vancouver's Men's Canadian Club that because 80 per cent of B.C.'s power is generated by hydro-electric stations already built, electric power should be "immune to inflation."

Instead, power rates have risen by 40 per cent since the New Democratic party formed the B.C. government in 1972, he said.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said residential rates have increased 20 per cent and non-residential rates by 18 per cent while large industrial rates are to jump 50 to 55 per cent and bulk rates 70 per cent by next year.

"Whatever the figure is, it's too much," Shrum said in an interview after his speech.

He told the meeting there is no justification for B.C. Hydro giving its workers a 28-per-cent wage settlement, nor for its covering such a large deficit on transit operations—$20.8 million for 1974.

"How can any group in society demand a 28-per-cent increase in its standard of living when we're in the midst of a recession or depression?" he said.

"Buses are all right. I have no objection to buses, but I don't think they should be charged to electric power."

Shrum, 79, scoffed at those who say the world faces a serious energy crisis.

Although a shortage in petroleum may be developing, the world has enough coal to last at least 200 years, and uranium for thousands of years beyond, he said.

No Change For B.C.

A federal pension plan designed for elderly couples living on one pension will have no direct effect on British Columbians because of existing provincial pension benefits under Mincome.

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi said the federal plan will mean about 8,000 British Columbians will be receiving an old age pension for the first time, but since those people are probably on Mincome, the federal funds will simply reduce the amount of provincial money going to those people under the guaranteed income scheme.

Legislation 'Modest'

A bill allowing Resources Minister Bob Williams to set up Crown corporations to develop ferry services and Crown land was described by the minister Thursday as a "modest" piece of legislation.

It is designed to bring the lands branch "into the twentieth century," said Williams.

The "modest tools" for action, given to the branch in the new legislation, said Williams, are minor compared to the economic power of other large corporations like the CPR.

The bill, has been strongly attacked by opposition members who charge it gives the minister super powers to create corporations without reference to the legislature.

But Williams, in his first public defence of the bill, which amends the Department of Lands, Forests and Water Resources Act, said the opposition really opposes the bill because it will bring the NDP government success.

The government plans to use the bill to legalize the company it created to operate the Princess Margaret ferry and to develop the Inner Harbor lands bought by the government.

Development of the Whistler Mountain, Black Comb Mountain area, with an alpine village and full skiing facilities will also be handled under the new legislation.

Williams said the opposition's real concern is that those ventures will be successful.

In the first two weeks of operation, the Margaret brought in $194,309 in revenue and has probably created about $5 million in new dollars in the capital city.

It has served 16,207 passengers on the Seattle to Victoria run.

ICBC TALKS TO RESUME

Negotiations will resume Tuesday between the Insurance Corp. of B.C. and representatives of the 1,800 striking members of the Office and Technical Employees Union, Transport Minister Bob Strachan said Thursday.

Strachan said the ICBC management team requested that bargaining resume after a board of directors meeting earlier this week.

Negotiations have not yet dealt with the question of wages.

'Bias Against Tenants' Charged in Credit Plan

An Independent M.L.A. charged Thursday the provincial government is discriminating against B.C. renters by giving homeowners twice the financial benefits received by tenants.

Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) criticized the disparity between the $200 homeowner grant given to people who can afford to purchase accommodation and the maximum $100 tax credit for renters.

The government is making an unfortunate distinction," said Williams suggesting that the benefits at least be equalized.

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, leading debate in the absence of Premier Barrett, defended the government's policy, saying there are other factors that balance out the inequity.

He said homeowners are required to pay all the costs of maintenance, but costs of apartment maintenance are not paid by the renter, but by the owner who can charge costs against income tax.

In that case, he said, it is the community at large that is paying for the maintenance.

Soils Branch Chief Named

Anton Schori has been appointed head of the agriculture department's soils branch, replacing P. N. Sprout, Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said Thursday.

Schori will supervise the advisory branch, which provides technical input for the B.C. Land Commission.

Schori has taken a position with the Environment and Land Use Secretariat here.

The section in question defined bicycle as meaning a "device having any number of wheels that is propelled by human power and on which a person will ride."

It was included in the act to revise a former definition to cover the recently marketed three-wheeled pedal car, the legislation's explanatory note said.

But Wallace took issue with the definition claiming bicycle wheels, in his recommendation was accepted after Strachan considered the matter.

The word bicycle will be scrapped throughout the act and replaced with the word cycle, thanks to Wallace's efforts.

CHRYSLER CANADA BUSY, U.S. 'HELL OF A MESS'

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The president of Chrysler Canada Ltd. says the Canadian firm here is in great shape, while the parent firm, Chrysler Corp. of Detroit, is feeling its way back to firmer ground.

"There is no doubt that the car industry in the United States is in one hell of a mess," Ron W. Todgham, 64, said in an interview. "But that is not the case in Canada. The car industry here is in great shape and so is Chrysler."

He was reacting to reports that the parent firm will emerge from the current U.S. recession poorer and smaller, and that it will get out of the big-car field, unable to compete with Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp.

Todgham said the parent firm is not getting out of the big-car field, and although the name Imperial was dropped, the big car it represented was not.

"We will have a car out this fall that will physically approximately resemble the Imperial, but with a different name."

The Windsor plant is the one source of the Cordoba model, an intermediate-size car introduced this year, and accounts for the plant's productivity.

Todgham said because of an unexpected buildup of orders, the local plant has been running two full shifts and scheduling overtime to meet demand.

"Across the road, we are scheduling overtime. Across the river (Detroit), there are thousands of layoffs."

U.K. Gov't Lucky Pound Is Floating

LONDON (Reuter) — The government can thank its lucky stars the British pound is floating, meaning there is no fixed dollar parity the Bank of England must defend.

The recent runs on the British pound would have cost the central bank dearly had it been obliged to throw in Britain's foreign currency reserves to buy up pounds and resist the downward trend of the foreign exchange markets.

Now, the bank can watch and wait. If the slide gets out of hand, it is free to step into the market at the moment of its own choosing.

Because most of the world's currencies are floating, shifts in value are liable to happen any time. The pound has been undergoing a steady slide downward—by more than 25 per cent in about three years.

The over-all performance of floating currencies is assessed in terms of appreciation or depreciation against leading currencies since the last attempt to establish fixed exchange rates in December, 1971.

The occasion was a finance ministers' meeting in Washington when the United States dollar was devalued and most other currencies were rated higher in U.S. dollar terms.

The system failed because it was too inflexible for present-day market conditions.

With floating exchange rates, one area of formal links remains—"the snake" whose members maintain fixed parities among themselves although their currencies float together against the rest.

Britain dropped out of the snake in 1972 because the pound was too weak. France just decided to rejoin after leaving last year when its currency was under strong downward pressures.

Lacking the constraints of the group's membership, the pound has lost ground by about four per cent since April.

In that month, the pound's depreciation stood at 22.5 per cent, reaching 25.2 in mid-May before the Bank of England decided to intervene.

The decision that Britain should remain in the European Economic Community should have helped to restore confidence but the slide started again.

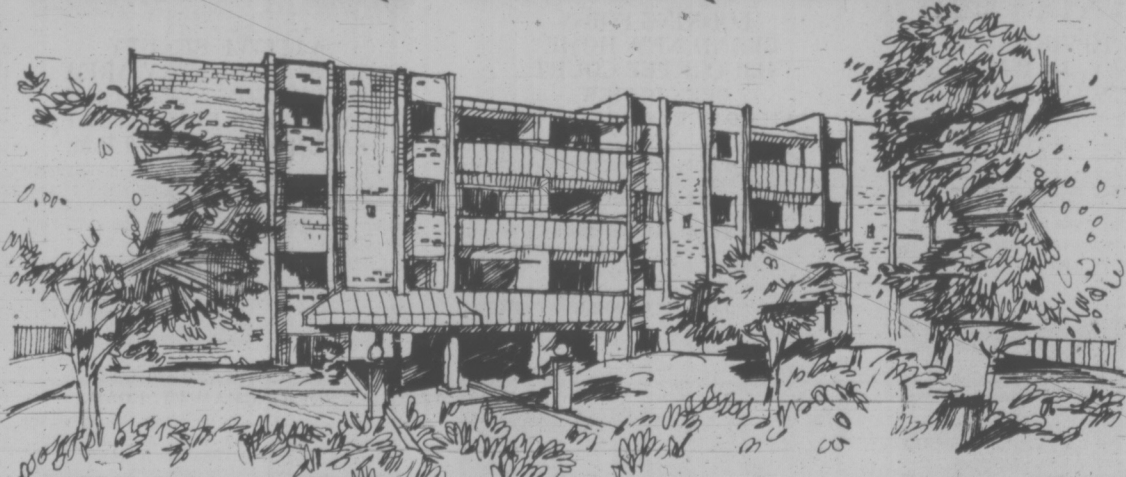

The pound gained slightly on news of an improvement in Britain's trade figures but on June 17 it reached a record low of 26.7 per cent.

While the downward drift makes British exports more competitive, they cost less to buy in terms of foreign currencies—imports are going to cost much more, adding to inflation already 25 per cent a year.

A concern for the British is that oil-producing countries might decide to pull out their money. Britain has to depend on those governments continuing to buy pounds for deposit in London to meet its balance-of-payments deficits.

The picture should change when North Sea oil starts to flow in abundance in a few years.

Abitibi Paper

Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. said that due to lack of orders it is closing its Smooth Rock Falls mill June 15, for the fifth time this year. Smooth Rock Falls is about 80 miles north-east of Timmins, Ont. Operations will resume July 2, the company said. About 370 employees are affected.

Woodward Stores

Woodward Stores Ltd. profit dropped 54 per cent to $326,387 in the first quarter of 1975. C. N. Woodward, chairman, has reported to stockholders.

Profit for the corresponding period of 1974 was $1,155,055. Sales increased 12.9 per cent to $117,821,798 from $104,343,510, he said, which was not sufficient to offset rising costs. Last year's first-quarter earnings made up 11.3 per cent of the 1974 total.

Woodward said Alberta operations' sales and earnings were satisfactory because of the buoyant economy there.

These good results were offset by operations in British Columbia where the economy suffers from depressed demand for the province's major products, further compounded by continuing labor strife and uncertainty, Woodward said.

Quebec North Shore

Quebec North Shore Paper Co. Ltd. said it will be forced to lay off about 1,200 employees because of a lack of demand for newspaper.

John E. Houghton, the firm's vice-president, said the workers will be laid off from June 21 to July 2.

He said newspaper supplies have accumulated to a 56-day supply, compared to a 32-day supply at the corresponding time last year.

Bale-Comeau is about 220 miles northeast of Quebec City.

Chrysler Canada

Chrysler Canada Ltd. has received an order for 1,000 bus chassis. After being fitted with bodies, the units will be sent to Saudi Arabia from the United States by the export-import division of Chrysler Corp. of Detroit.

Cyprus Anvil

Shareholders of Cyprus Anvil Mining Corp. were told at their annual meeting that the company has a strong exploration program and has initiated a quarterly dividend of 15 cents which it expects to maintain.

Chairman John Bruk said after payment of dividends the company will invest earnings in expansion and improvements at the mine, in exploration and in improvements to the town of Faro, Y.T.

"If we find we can't invest the money profitably for future growth, we'll return it to you in larger dividends," Bruk said.

He said capital investment will be about $12 million this year and the same amount next year. This year's initial exploration budget is $1.3 million.

China, Philippines Trading Again

'Big Brother' Crime Cure

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — A sociologist says that medical manipulation could be used to make the United States virtually crime-free by the year 2000. But he says he's worried about the "Big Brother" implications of the system.

"We are so effective in manipulative medical and technological techniques that criminal behavior can be controlled," said Dr. Richard Moran.

Moran, an expert of crime and crime control who is an assistant professor at Mount Holyoke College in Massachusetts, spoke at the 22nd National Institute on Crime and Delinquency.

Moran said hospitals and prisons could blur into one institution where the physically and criminally ill would be medically treated.

Society would have to allow medical intervention to treat a criminal, who would not be judged from a moral or guilt viewpoint but as someone "who is defective and needs treatment," he added.

But he warned that when crime becomes no different from other illnesses and is treated medically, "without vexing moral judgment," it would be easy for a coercive government to impose treatment on those who won't co-operate.

He predicted an early warning screening system to weed out potential criminals, much like public health screenings of persons with undetected disease. Those persons found to be crime-prone would theoretically be treated by implanting electronic devices in the brain which could be used to monitor his movements.

He said many cities already have "Big Brother" watching in the form of television surveillance of high-crime business districts. Mount Vernon, N.Y., Hoboken, N.J., Tampa, Fla., and Baltimore, he said, are among cities where citizens have surrendered their right to privacy to ensure their safety against criminals by TV surveillance of their streets.

Teacher Awarded $67,300

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court jury Thursday awarded school teacher Barbara Haight $67,300 in damages as the result of a libel and slander action.

Harry Robb, principal of Arthur Hutton elementary school and main defendant, had damages assessed against him amounting to $32,300 after the jury found he had libelled and slandered Haight. The jury awarded $30,000 for libel.

Six other defendants had judgments totalling $35,000 against them — all for libel.

Haight claimed she suffered mental anguish and duress as a result of reports and letters critical of her as a person and as a teacher that were sent to Charles Bruce, superintendent of schools for the Kamloops district.

The other judgments were:

Carolyn Moyer, mother of a student, $3,000; Virginia Cross, another mother, and school principal Jack Harper, who were jointly charged with libel, $8,000; principal Rachael Couplier, $8,000; principal Neil Toews $5,000, and principal Ralph Shaw $9,000.

All defendants are from the Kamloops area. The trial lasted six weeks and the jury deliberated more than 10 hours before reaching a verdict.

In her original suit, Haight named 14 defendants including members of the Kamloops School Board. She claimed some had conspired against her and others had defamed her.

Earlier this week, Mr. Justice J. G. Rutan found that conspiracy had not been proved and dismissed charges against seven persons.

Indian Women Seek Guards

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Indian Homemakers Association of B.C. has asked for police protection for some delegates to the group's annual conference, association president Rose Charlie said Thursday.

She said in an interview she is arranging protection for women who spoke out at the conference against the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs' policy of rejecting government funds.

No incidents occurred at the conference, which ended Thursday, but some delegates said they were concerned about their safety when they return home.

An RCMP spokesman in nearby Richmond, where the conference was held, said Mrs. Charlie has written an official note to the police.

"We are certainly acting to assess it and will provide assistance if required," said the spokesman.

Irene Harris of Chemainus said in an interview the band office was broken into Wednesday and files taken.

She also said some members on her reserve had accused her of using band funds for the conference and she expects to face further accusations when she gets home.

Agnes Dick of the Sheshaht band at Port Alberni, and Mrs. Harris both said at the conference that Indian leaders are putting children in the front lines to force a settlement on land claims by rejecting government aid.

Mrs. Dick said the conference was intimidated by Indian leaders and that those hands which wish to continue government funding are harassed.

"I have nothing against the land claim issue," Mrs. Dick said Thursday. "But the people who are pushing it don't consult the majority."

Pemberton Blockade

PEMBERTON (CP) — Indians have blockaded the Mount Currie - Lillooet road near here to protest seizure of two fishing nets by federal fisheries officers.

The Mount Currie reserve members are stopping white people from using the road, which passes through the reserve, band councillor Lloyd Williams said Thursday.

"We don't trust any white men going by," he said. "A lot of tourists go through here."

80,000 Claims Stymied

A Sacred MLA said Thursday there are 300,000 faulty applications in the Insurance Corporation of B.C. files which must be processed by hand.

Bob McClelland (Langley) said ICBC's computer rejected 400,000 claims and other applications last year because of errors in the forms.

He said 80,000 of those still have not been handled and another 300,000 application forms have been rejected by the computer this year.

The forms include all kinds of applications for claims, refunds, renewals and regular insurance coverage.

ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick said in a telephone interview he would have to check out the charge and report to Transport Minister Bob Strachan.

When asked in the legislature, Strachan said he would investigate.

The Sacred said the errors are made by the people filling out the forms, but once the computer rejects an application, it must be handled individually by clerks.

Errors are probably inevitable in such a large organization run with the aid of a computer, he said.

JUKEBOX FINE

NANAIMO — A loud jukebox has netted a $25 fine for the owner of an arcade here.

Joe Eberts of the California Joke and Book Shop and Arcade was found guilty in provincial court of violating the anti-noise bylaw.

The jukebox on his premises could be heard in the street, court was told.

Eberts will meet with city council soon to discuss complaints by the Nanaimo City Centre Merchants Association about alleged open drinking, foul language and litter at the shop.

Eberts' arcade is a gathering place for Nanaimo teenagers.

No Decision on Funding

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau
OTTAWA — Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said Thursday that he is prepared to change local government guidelines for Indian bands if they want, but refused to say whether funding will be cut off if the guidelines are not approved by July.

Conservative MPs charged in the Commons that Indians have been warned they will not receive second quarter funding to support their children unless they agree to the guidelines relating to local government on reserves and accounting for the use of public funds.

Former Tory Prime Minister John Diefenbaker called on Buchanan to ensure that the funding will be provided the Indians "for starvation faces them because they dared to stand for a principle."

The minister said other groups have been bringing forward specific changes to the guidelines "for months."

Diefenbaker noted that the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, the Indian Association of Alberta and the Federation of Saskatchewan Indians all are publicly opposed to the guidelines, and asked why they are being "intimidated" by Ottawa.

Rape of Fisheries Protested by MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Government and opposition agreed Thursday that some foreign fleets are raping coastal fisheries but disagreed on measures to stop the assault.

Newfoundland Progressive Conservatives took the hardest line, with Walter Carter (St. John's West) moving that Canada declare a 200-mile territorial limit without international agreement.

Jack Marshall (Humber St. George's-St. Barbe) said "fishermen are not going to listen much longer" and they might go after foreign vessels themselves.

External Affairs Minister

Allan MacEachen said, however, that declaring a 200-mile limit "would involve us in serious confrontation" with other countries.

Newfoundland and Nova Scotia have urged Ottawa to impose a 200-mile limit.

Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said Canada is on the verge of gaining international agreement on such a limit, plus more control over its coastal fishery.

As he spoke, however, a conference of the 14-nation International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries was about to end in Scotland without acceptance of Canadian pleas for a 40-per-cent reduction in foreign fishing off the East Coast. Another meeting on the issue will be held in the autumn.

MacEachen had described the proposal as a bold one that would reduce substantially the foreign catch. Carter called it ridiculous and impossible to enforce because Canada is having trouble enforcing current agreements on fishing quotas.

LeBlanc, whose New Brunswick riding includes many fishermen, said coastal air and sea patrols had revealed that some foreign fleets are violating existing agreements on fishing quotas.

Grain Loss Set at $261M

OTTAWA (FP) — Labor disruptions in the West Coast grain handling and transportation system cost the wheat farmers of Canada $261 million during the crop year 1974-75, The Palliser Wheat Growers Association has estimated.

That works out to 50 cents a bushel of $1,700 per farmer, Don Mazankowski (PC-Vegreville) told the commons Thursday.

He wanted the matter referred immediately to a special parliamentary committee to consider ways and means of resolving the labor-management standoff, and to come up with ideas for enabling farmers to recover their losses.

Mortgage Money Blamed

OTTAWA (CP) — A shortage of mortgage money rather than failure of government housing policies is responsible for the slump in housing starts this year, says Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson.

"There is a very serious problem of a shortage of mortgage funds," he told John Gilbert (NDP-Toronto Broadview) in the Commons Thursday.

"This is the difficulty with which we are dealing." Some financial institutions have said they no longer have mortgage funds available and others have indicated their mortgage money supply is tight.

Gilbert said government policies failed because they did not attract sufficient money to meet the government's target of 210,000 housing starts this year.

The petroleum bill, which was the subject of heated Commons debate, also authorizes the federal government to collect an export tax on crude oil exported to the United States and subsidize the price of high-priced im-

Federal Oil Price Law Receives Royal Assent

OTTAWA (CP) — The Petroleum Administration Act, which gives the federal government the power to set oil and natural gas prices was signed into law Thursday.

It was one of several bills given royal assent in the Senate by Chief Justice Bora Laskin of the Supreme Court of Canada, on behalf of Gov. Gen. Jule Leger.

Other bills: —Extend the two-price wheat system which has been in effect since 1973; —Raise the salaries of federally-appointed judges and lieutenant-governors; —Establish the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission, which succeeds the Canadian Radio-Television Commission and extends its authority over some telephone and telecommunications operations; —Allows for the appointment of two senators from the Yukon and Northwest Territories; —Control export and import of cultural property; —Make it illegal to pollute the seas without a permit.

No Jail Sentence Should Deny Hope —Law Commission

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada has suggested abolition of life imprisonment for any offence and says no sentence should be longer than 20 years.

"No sentence of imprisonment should deny hope to the offender," the commission says in a working paper released today.

Currently non-capital murder, manslaughter, rape, break and entry of a dwelling, and some drug offences carry a possible life sentence.

The commission rejects rehabilitation or deterrence as grounds for imprisonment. It says imprisonment can be justified only on three grounds:

—Separation of offenders who represent a serious threat to the life or personal security of others. The maximum should be 20 years, with progressive release procedures tied to conduct.

—Denunciation of behavior regarded as reprehensible because of its violation of fundamental values. Sentences should be no longer than three years. Offenders in this category would include, for example, those who abused trust or public office, or persons convicted of murder or other serious crimes who are unlikely to hurt other persons.

—Willful refusal to pay a fine or pay restitution to a victim, or to meet terms of probation. Six months should be the maximum in these cases.

The commission notes that one Canadian in 1,000 is in jail today—20,000. About 75,000 are incarcerated each year in federal, provincial or municipal jails.

About one-half the 4,000 persons sent to federal prisons each year have committed non-violent offences. Fewer than 20 per cent of those in federal or provincial prisons are there as a result of violence.

"Almost 50 per cent of prisoners in some provincial institutions were imprisoned because they could not pay fines," the commission notes.

One first offender in seven charged with non-violent offences goes to jail. Almost 50 per cent of second offenders in this category are jailed.

The commission describes prison as costly, not only to the prisoners but also to guards, prison officials and society.

"What does imprisonment do not only to the captive but to the captor?" the commission asks. "What social and psychological forces press upon his personality? Are these sufficiently recognized as a cost society passes on to the prison worker and his family?"

Keeping a person in prison costs up to $14,000 a year. In addition there are often welfare costs to keep his family.

Fewer than 17 per cent of federal prisoners are engaged in industrial work. Wages rarely exceed $13.50 a month. Taxes, restitution, family obligations aren't met.

The cost to the prisoner himself is sometimes suicide, often "a lessening of respect for the administration of justice" as he tries to cope with the court, then the prison officials, then the parole officials.

"The problem is that the various statutes do not reflect a common or coherent philosophy," the commission notes. Within the prison itself, the prisoners have their own system of justice.

"It is at least partially true that large security prisons can only be run with the co-operation and tacit consent of the prisoners," the commission notes. "There are understood limits beyond which the administration may go only at its peril."

Yet the almost invisible and non-accountable nature of the prisoners' power results in tension, coercion and injustice within the institutions.

Killings of prisoners, often sex offenders regarded with contempt by others, aren't uncommon in Canadian prisons.

Prisoners also "are beaten by other prisoners, or forced to submit to homosexual acts. "Perhaps these costs are inevitable as long as imprisonment means a place—putting people in boxes and keeping them there," the commission says.

The commission also recommends that:

—The habitual offender law, by which a person may be imprisoned indefinitely, be abolished. It says the law is applied unevenly across Canada and often to petty offenders rather than to dangerous or professional criminals. The commission says "crime's upper management" is rarely touched.

—The 1948 dangerous sexual offender law be abolished and such offenders be dealt with under ordinary sentencing law. Furthermore, a judge should be appointed to look into the cases of those now in prison with the object of establishing a release program, periodic review of their cases, and an end to these life sentences—only "after a period of successful living in the community."

EDMONTON (CP) — Two Canadian Wildlife Service researchers have suggested that raising such wild animals as bison, moose, elk and deer could be the answer to making better use of Alberta's marginal land.

Dr. E. S. Telfer and Dr. G. W. Scotter, both of Edmonton, have conducted studies into the use of such animals, including imported species such as the yak or wild animals cross-bred with domestic animals.

The economic aspects were not studied but that from an ecological viewpoint such ranching was practical, they said in a joint interview.

Wildlife, particularly a mixture of species, can make efficient use of aspen forest or natural grass and browse while domestic cattle need tame grass. In addition, wild animals adapt to the problems of insects, predators and climate which enables them to exist in areas which would be fatal to domesticated species.

Wildlife meat also has less fat, more protein and fewer calories than regular beef and making use of natural growth would free farm crops for feeding a hungry world.

The two researchers said they were not suggesting converting existing cattle land to wildlife ranching, but the use of aspen parklands in northern areas.

Logging could proceed on such ranches because it would encourage fresh browse and new grasslands, they said. Studies conducted at Elk Island National Park east of Edmonton have shown that high populations of game can intensively browse an area without destroying it, they said.

However, they added there could be objections to the concept from three groups—cattlemen objecting to competition, sportsmen who would lose open hunting areas, and natives who might regard it as an intrusion on their hunting privileges. But the Indians might welcome the concept, as some have done in the United States, as a form of agricultural endeavor close to their preferred lifestyle.

"With 400 million people threatened with starvation and 10 million expected to die of starvation this year, we have a moral and social obligation to look to the most efficient food production," Dr. Scotter said.

TRAINING WITH PAY

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal civil servants competing in the 1976 Montreal Olympics will receive three months paid leave of absence for training, Treasury Board President Jean Chretien said in the Commons Thursday.

This will give some athletes more time "to get into condition, to win as many medals as possible," Chretien said.

Treasury board officials had no immediate estimate of how many civil servants will qualify for the paid leave or how much it will cost.

Chretien said Treasury Board changed an earlier decision to allow athletes leave without pay at the discretion of department heads.

Ontario's Kerr Bides Time

HAMILTON (CP) — Former Ontario solicitor-general George Kerr told reporters Thursday he expects to return to the cabinet once his name, sullied by allegations in connection with the harbor dredging trial, is cleared.

Kerr had just finished testifying at the trial where he told the Ontario Supreme Court jury that allegations of misdealings in connection with his 1971 election campaign fund are lies.

The politician, who resigned from the cabinet in February when his name was first linked to the trial, denied any wrongdoing.

His testimony centred around evidence heard earlier at the trial. A witness quoted former Hamilton harbor commissioner Kenneth Elliott as saying Mr. Kerr demanded a $10,000 campaign contribution in 1971 in return for his influence as environment minister at the time.

"It's a vicious lie," Mr. Kerr said. "Any man who would say that is a scoundrel."

Other testimony had Elliott alleging the minister pocketed $30,000 surplus in his campaign fund after the October, 1971, vote.

Activist Eyes U.S. Presidency

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (UPI) — Julian Bond, civil rights activist and a black member of the Georgia legislature, said he would seek the Democratic nomination for president. He denounced one of his potential rivals, Alabama Gov. George Wallace, as a "hillbilly Hitler."

Bond, 35, told a news conference before a speech here that if he finds when he gets to the Democratic National Convention that he does not have the necessary delegates for nomination he will withdraw.

U.S. State Dept. Softens Stance On Garrison

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The U.S. state department is furious at the U.S. interior department, accusing it of withholding information that could have solved the dispute with Canada about the Garrison water diversion project.

A strongly-worded statement issued Thursday said the state department has the entire situation under review.

The statement suggested that the information withheld from state department negotiators could "meet Canada's concern" about the huge North Dakota project being built by the interior department's bureau of reclamation.

But lacking the information, the negotiators were unable to reach an agreement with Canadian officials at a meeting held early this year.

Canada has protested that in its present form the Garrison scheme will cause serious pollution of rivers in Manitoba.

The controversial information concerned alternative plans and modifications to the project.

The interior department had this information before the negotiating session, according to memorandums unearthed Wednesday by a congressional committee.

One memo, dated two days before the meeting, and passed between interior department officials, said: "We do not plan to make this information available to the state department..."

A state department spokesman said Thursday that the information was not received until a few days ago.

"Insofar as the memorandum discussed alternatives which might meet Canadian concern, we believe the information could have affected the outcome of the meeting in a positive fashion," the spokesman said.

The meeting was held in Washington on Jan. 16. The memorandum, from the assistant secretary of interior to the under-secretary, was dated Jan. 14.

As it turned out the two countries were unable to agree to a solution to the dispute, and decided to refer it to the International Joint Commission.

But other interior department memos indicate subsequent efforts to "influence" the work of the IJC, including placing the head of the bureau of reclamation in charge of engineering studies which the commission is expected to seek.

The state department spokesman termed the memos "unfortunate."

"We are reviewing the entire matter," he said.

The spokesman sidestepped further questions "pending the outcome of that review."

However it was learned from an informed source that the state department expects to exert strong pressure on the IJC to prevent the bureau of reclamation from playing a leading role in its studies, if, in fact, the dispute is referred to the IJC.

Canada and the U.S. have not yet agreed to the precise terms of reference to the IJC, but there is now a possibility of further negotiations, to discuss the alternative plans.

If such negotiations resulted in an agreement, there would be no need to refer the Garrison project to the IJC.

If the dispute is not solved within the next year, construction could be so advanced that it would be too late to change the project to avoid pollution in Canada.

Grain Wasn't Inspected

WASHINGTON (AP) — An agriculture department report written after the Nicaraguan government complained about the poor quality of grain from the United States conceded that the federal government failed to supervise the inspection of the loading operation.

The grain had been stored at the Public Elevator Co. in New Orleans, where three federally licensed inspectors were employed, before they were indicted on corruption charges.

The director of the Agricultural Marketing Service grain division, which oversees the inspection program, said the failure to supervise the inspection when the 1972 Nicaraguan purchase was loaded from the grain elevator to the ship was a coincidence.

"The chances are good that the next day we were in there," David Galliard, who took over the job June 1, said Thursday.

Sentinels Needed to Battle 'Inevitable' Oil Spills

Times Staff

The Canadian navy should have ships permanently stationed at Victoria, Port Renfrew and in Barkley Sound ready to fight massive oil spills, says Lofy Coning, former Royal Navy officer who teaches sea lore and maritime history at Camosun College.

Warning oil spills are inevitable when the United States opens its oil tanker route from Alaska to refineries on the Washington side of the Strait of Juan de Fuca, Coning said.

"Pollution-fighting equipment should be stockpiled at Victoria, Port Renfrew and Barkley Sound. These shouldn't be store depots but coastal minesweepers with equipment aboard and ready to move when needed."

Coning, who says he was "in the RN when those who went to sea were sailors," says the Canadian navy is lacking in materials and know-how when it comes to fighting oil pollution.

"As Canada's navy hasn't any oil to go to sea, it should be given training right now on how to combat oil pollution."

There are six minesweepers at Esquimalt being used for junior officer training. All are slated for refits, beginning this fall, at a cost of $1.5 million.

Coning faulted the federal government for being unresponsive to British Columbia's plea for assistance in seeking American co-operation on minimizing the danger of oil pollution.

"There will be endless possibilities for disaster," Coning warned. "(Premier Dave) Barrett made a very cogent plea to the federal government but it fell on deaf ears. We're too far from Ottawa."

Coning said Canada should be leading the way in international negotiations, using agencies like the United Nations' International Marine Consultative Organization to hammer out controls.

In the rush to build tankers, Coning said the tanker charter market has become glutted and there is a danger that older, unsafe tankers could be sold to countries using "flags of convenience" — registered ships that are often commanded and manned by inexperienced seamen.

To make as fat a profit as possible, Coning said oil companies have tankers built that are underpowered and unable to manoeuvre because they have only one propeller, making them into "floating islands."

Some of the larger tankers take as long as 30 minutes and a distance of 10 miles to stop, Coning said. Because of this problem, the IMCO is trying to amend the rules of the road.

"You've got to get out of their (the tankers) way," Coning explained. "They can't get out of yours."

"The oil-producing industry is probably the most unscrupulous in this age. They can make sugar refineries and the nice kind bankers look like your local Avon lady."

Coning said Canada and other countries whose coastline is threatened by tankers should be insisting on at least two controls being written into international sea law.

"No tanker of 150,000 tons or more should be allowed unless she has twin screws, a double bottom, segregated ballast tanks and an adequate auxiliary boiler," Coning said.

And, in order to stop the sale of deteriorating tankers, Coning warned, "No tanker of any size should be allowed to change hands without a special survey."

Pool Matches Up Farmers, Laborers

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Farm laborers looking for work and farm owners searching for workers have a new matchmaking service in Victoria to help them get together.

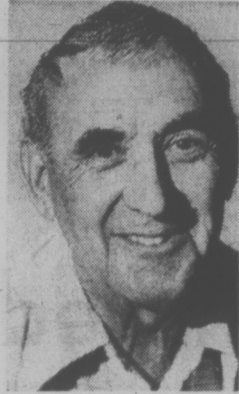

The service is the Canada Farm Labor Pool office that opened in May at 3400 Douglas Street.

Head matchmaker is a tall, personable ex-farmer named Arthur Garcia, assistant manager of the pool office, which is a sub-office of the Duncan branch.

The strawberry season on the Saanich Peninsula opened earlier this week and the office now has about 250 names on its list of potential berry pickers.

The farm labor pool offices are set-up under the federal manpower and immigration branch, but local wages and working conditions are established by LAMBS (Local Agricultural Manpower Boards).

Price for berry pickers this year is set at between eight and 10 cents per pound, depending on the yield of the field. Garcia said the price is set so that an average student picker can earn about the minimum wage.

counsels pickers

The staff at the farm labor office — Garcia, Gordon Ross who specializes in labor need for berries, daffodils and landscaping, and secretary-receptionist Lilia Smale — don't try to make berry picking out to be something it isn't.

"We point out all the bad features of it," Garcia said. "We tell people that it's hot, they'll be stooped over on their hands and knees and that there is no piped music around them all day."

The office is looking for registrants for berry picking and fruit thinning, but it will also cover almost every kind of agricultural business in the area — hay, mushrooms, flowers, bulbs, greenhouse crops, nursery shrubs, sheep, beef cattle, horses and poultry.

The office screens applicants for the farm jobs and waits until a labor order comes in from a farmer and then goes through its list to find suitable people.

Garcia said the pickers come from different sectors — housewives, students and unemployed workers from other industries. Unlike areas in the states and in other parts of Canada, the farm labor force here is mostly local, with only a small percentage of transient labor.

The farm labor office tries to arrange car pools of people going to the Peninsula fields and also hands out bus schedules. It is trying this year to have a congregating point at the Saanich Fruit Growers' Association warehouse on Keating Crossroad, where the workers would gather and then be picked up by the farmer they are working for.

Until this year, farm labor needs were handled through the summer employment office of the Canada Manpower. This year, 35 of the farm labor pool offices were set up in agricultural areas across Canada.

Garcia said he and the staff will try to counsel growers who have problems with pickers, or vice versa.

The office will also keep a list of particularly good pickers.

Ten years ago local growers were employing up to 1,000 berry pickers per year. Last year the need declined to 300 and Garcia said the decline is largely due to the importation of large amounts of berries and fresh fruits and the decline in availability of good pickers.

"B.C. farmers have to meet the competition of some of the largest and most advanced farmers in the world," Garcia said.

"Their competition has the advantage of longer growing seasons, warmer weather, cheaper cost of production and the assistance of governments who spend literally billions of dollars to help them produce their crops as economically as possible."

Garcia said the province of B.C. must recognize the importance of the agriculture industry and make sure it remains competitive.

New Sailing For Mv. Coho

Unusually heavy tourist traffic has forced Black Ball Ferries to advance its summer Mv. Coho sailing schedule to Port Angeles.

Four round trip sailings will be made each day beginning Saturday, when a 6:30 a.m. sailing will depart from Victoria.

Current sailings from Victoria are at 11 a.m., 3:30 and 7:30 p.m. for the 1½ hour one-way trip.

With the aid of a telescopic lens Times photographer John McKay makes it appear so as he captures plume of smoke rising from a fire fighting exercise at the nuclear, biological, chemical and damage control school onshore.

Hose Whips Woman

A whipping fire hose left an Esquimalt woman with bruises and abrasions when it pulled free from a hydrant and struck her as she walked down Government Street Thursday.

Barbara Ann Jarymy of 422-531 West Bay Terrace was taken to hospital, treated and released.

Victoria firemen were attending a fire on the roof of the Roger's Chocolates building, 913 Government, which had been reported at 4:44 p.m.

Deputy fire chief Carl Coates said the fire hose was being unwound and pulled toward the building, when for some reason it stopped unwinding and pulled off the hydrant.

The fire, which did about $300 damage, was probably caused by someone tossing a cigarette butt from the Weiler building next to Roger's Chocolates, Coates said.

It was quickly extinguished, although firemen had some problems getting to it because of work being done on Government.

Lake Victim Named

An inquest will be held July 7 into the death of Kathleen Joan Mallory, 20, of 1540 Mortimer, whose body was recovered from a car that plunged into Kemp Lake near Sooke on Saturday.

Sooke coroner Roy Girling will hold the inquest in the community hall in Sooke at 7:30 p.m. Sooke RCMP had been withholding name of the victim pending notification of next-of-kin.

The accident was reported to police Tuesday by Wayne Lloyd Hansen, 23, of 1890 Maple, who had been driving the car which sank in the lake.

Hansen told police he and Mallory had been attending a dance at Glen Lake Friday night and were trying to find a house party in the Sooke area early Saturday morning.

He said he thought they were driving on Kemp Lake Rd., but instead they were on Milligan, which ends abruptly at the lake.

The car shot off a boat ramp at the end of the road and out about 45 feet, settling in a spot where the water is about 15 feet deep.

Hansen's collie dog was in the car trunk, and didn't escape.

Hansen crawled out a door before the car sank, but his companion didn't follow him and when he tried to rescue her the car had sunk and he was unable to find it.

Mallory's body was recovered late Tuesday by Sooke RCMP.

The Mysterious Valley of the Turtles

A POWER SHOVEL OPERATOR was chunking road ballast out of a logging country sidehill a few months ago when the jaws of his rig crunched against unyielding rock. In a cut that had deepened through layer upon layer of fractured limestone, the shovelman hadn't expected resistance of this sort. His curiosity roused, he gouged and pecked at the shattered face.

As the slabs of sediment-bound limestone peeled away, the stone they enclosed began to take shape. The shovel jaws clamped in a solid grip on the rock that wouldn't be crushed. The mass they heaved out of the past into the light of the present was so incredible as to defy belief.

It had the shape and carried the shell pattern, of a gigantic turtle.

That object and the others of its kind which have emerged from the sidehill at the edge of alpine terrain have posed a question. Just what are they? Fossilized monsters of earth's Triassic age, or merely outlandish rock formations?

We first heard about the Valley of the Turtles from a prospector friend whose sleuthings take him deep into the Vancouver Island hinterland.

"Whatever those things are," Bob told us, "they've been around a long time. Give or take, I'd say about 180 million years."

Here, I suspected, was a Vancouver Island tale from the fantasy-catalogue that includes the sidehill cougar, the sea serpent and the hairy white giant.

Bob and his wife Peggy, partners on inback expeditions these many years, stopped by a couple of days later. Bob produced a color photograph. In the foreground, an arrestingly-contoured hump of dark stone rested on a bed of crushed rock. Add flippers and reptilian head, and here was a turtle or land tortoise to the life.

But what a creature! It loomed enormous.

"That specimen is about five feet long and four across the curve," Bob said mildly. "How'd you two like to go in for a look at it?"

We set out for the valley early on a Sunday morning — three trucks and our hard-used car travelling in convoy.

In the party were two prospectors: Bob and the friend who had introduced him to the haunted nook among the sidehills a few days earlier. We brought our wives. The expedition had a picnic air.

We climbed by a bewildering

Yet another turnoff. We poked along a grade that wound its way through a stand of first-growth hemlock — eased around a bend — and were confronted by one of the strangest spectacles ever to amaze these eyes.

Turtles! That was my first startled conclusion. The fossilized shapes of sea-dwellers that had died here before man shambled his way upon earth.

ment of logging roads that grew progressively narrower, putting the populated coastal strip behind us.

The big, lone land that swallowed us lifted and swelled from ridge to ridge. It was clothed with evergreen second growth that has healed the logging scars of years gone by. Fresh bear droppings showed on the road. This is home to the black bear and cougar, the elk and the deer.

Yet another turnoff. We poked along a grade that wound its way through a stand of first-growth hemlock — eased around a bend — and were confronted by one of the strangest spectacles ever to amaze these eyes.

Turtles! That was my first startled conclusion. The fossilized shapes of sea-dwellers that had died here before man shambled his way upon earth.

For approximately 100 feet along the road edge beyond the cairn, similar shapes were ranged in a casual line. Still others had tumbled down-slope to lie amid brush and stumps.

Others, some of them fragmented, littered the bay where the shovel had chewed into the hillside.

Midway up the black, heavily-calculated limestone face that dropped from the gravel overburden, the strata arched in opposing curves. They traced the now-familiar teardrop shape of the mysteries from the past that flanked the road.

Embedded up there was another of those massive turtle-forms.

As Bob had said, the area was heavily fossilized. Pick up a shard of loose rock, and the chances were that it bore the imprint of marine life that had swarmed here when valley and sidehills were seabed.

Ed, the other prospector in the party, studied a tile that carried in delicate and perfect detail, a trilobite fossil.

"A sea snail," he said. "Part of the feed chain. From plankton to more complex forms."

Like the rest of us, he retained a determined skepticism, even though we wanted badly to believe the evidence of our eyes.

If those things are turtles — and I'm not saying they are — they died here in numbers. The flippers, heads and bodies would rot or be eaten away. The shells would fill with sediment that would turn into rock. So would the shells in time. But we don't know. Rock formations can take mighty strange shapes."

We do know that what was sea became land during one of earth's vast upheavals.

What we suspect, with later inquiry to bolster the hypothesis, is that the "turtles" of Turtle Valley are a set of fantastic rock formations.

Such pseudo-fossils occur — masses of harder rock found buried in softer accumulations. These can take various aspects. They can even mimic the ridged and plated pattern of a sea-turtle's back.

But we don't know, and won't until Vancouver Island's Valley of the Turtles is investigated by experts competent to interpret the mystery that lay hidden until a power shovel bit into a sidehill.

At present, the most pertinent comment on the wonders it holds is inscribed on a wooden slab spiked to rough-hewn uprights near the cairn: A large question-mark.

Tug-o-War Symphony Elections

Each of the opposing factions of the Victoria Symphony Society is fielding a full slate of candidates at the society's annual meeting Thursday to fill the 16 vacancies on the board of directors.

Both the society and the petitioners' committee, an opposing group within the society, have sent letters to the almost 1,600 symphony members listing the nominees supported by each group.

The majority of the vacancies are created by directors who have completed their terms and are not standing for re-election, including board chairman Madge Ronahan. One director, E. M. Johnson, resigned from the board of directors half way through his two-year term.

Three of the nominees appear on both lists of candidates—Terry Farmer, Bill Tindall and Gwen Dowding.

Composer Murray Adaskin, who resigned his board seat earlier this year over disagreement with policy and management decisions of the board, is standing for election and his name appears on the petitioners' committee candidate list.

John di Castri, a former president of the society, is also on the petitioners' list of nominees.

The petitioners' committee letter is signed by Nikola Pavelic who urges the society members to vote for "these men and women who are committed to a democratic and responsible administration of an orchestra which has become one of Victoria's principal cultural assets."

The petitioners' committee sets forth a "program for action" for the society.

The program includes: Amendments to the society's bylaws to "guarantee democratic accountability" of the board and to guarantee the members' rights to call special meetings, recall directors and fill resulting vacancies.

Implementation of the bylaw which makes the executive committee responsible to the board of directors in policy matters.

Review of existing administrative and staffing procedures.

"Aggressive" fund raising.

Expansion of the musical program.

Increased remuneration to orchestra members as additional funds become available.

Consideration of reducing the size of the board "to establish a more compact operation."

The annual meeting, which normally draws only a moderate crowd, is expected to be well-attended this year. The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday in the gymnasium of Monterey School, 851 Monterey.

Young Pros in Front But Palmer on Prowl

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) — The United States open golf championship is off to a soggy, steaming and surprising start with a couple of youngsters and veteran Arnold Palmer among the leaders.

"It's as good as the good old days, even better," said Palmer, a rejuvenated war horse of 45 seeking lost glories. "I felt I had charge of the golf course, I would like three more days just like it."

Palmer was the only one of golf's stars among the sub-par leaders after a 69 in Thursday's opening round over Medinah's rain-soaked 7,032 yards. Par is 71.

He was tied with three others, two strokes behind Tom Watson and Pat Fitzsimons who tied for the lead with 67s, and one stroke back of a 10-year tour veteran, Jim Weichers, who never has won a pro event.

Tied with Palmer at 69 were Peter Oosterhuis of Britain, Grier Jones and Lanny Wadkins.

"The long waits, they were terrible," he said. "It took us 3½ hours to play the round."

Bob Panasuk of Windsor, Ont., the only Canadian entered, shot a 76.

Fitzsimons, 23, who won the Los Angeles Open earlier this year, admitted that playing in the Open scared him, but he relaxed quickly, scoring a hole in one on the 187-yard second hole, sinking a six-iron shot, and used only four putts through the first five holes.

GETTING IN LATE LEGWORK for annual Y-Times track and field meet Saturday and Sunday at Centennial Stadium are (left to right) Glen Story, Jamie

RUTH'S TASK REAL TEST

Roger Ruth will have his pole vaulting talent amply tested at the Y-Times track and field meet Saturday and Sunday at Centennial Stadium.

The 47-year-old Victoria resident is world record holder in the masters class with a vault of 15'11½".

His main competition should come from two much younger athletes, Alan Kane and Harold Hees, both of Vancouver Olympic Club.

Hees and Kane have both cleared 16 feet. Kane has also represented Canada in international competition and can boast of a solid intercollegiate career at Simon Fraser University.

They are just three of the 1,036 athletes who have entered the two-day meet, which will feature a total of 188 open and age-class events.

Among the competitors entered are provincial high school champions John Pankratz of John Oliver (100 and 200 metres), long jumper, John Martens of Burnaby South (3,000 metres), Margo Howe of Lord Byng (100 and 200 metres), Pam Medland of Sentinel (400 metres), Allison Hayward of West Vancouver (javelin), Brit-Lind Peterson of West Vancouver (1,500 metres) and Wendy Davies of Mt. Douglas (100 metre hurdles).

Competition starts Saturday at 10 a.m. and Sunday at 9:45 a.m. and concludes Saturday about 8:15 p.m. and Sunday around 4 p.m.

HEADING FOR world archery championships at Interlaken, Switzerland, next week, will be Gerri Cosgrove (left) and Wanda Allan (right), members of Canadian women's team; and Fred Usher, who will act as an international judge and Canada's representative to World Archery Congress.

Archery: Two City Girls Eye World Championship

In 1940 when the late Colonel Peter Fleming was organizing a guerrilla force in Britain in the event of a German invasion, the longbow was one of the weapons selected for use because of the stealth with which it could be used. But if the bow at that time didn't actually scare off the would-be invaders, that is understandable because, actually, for the past 250 years or so the bow and arrow has been a weapon of sport, rather than spite, and a highly sophisticated piece of equipment it is as well.

And next week at Interlaken, Switzerland, archery as a sport reaches its climax for the year with the world championships featuring teams from 39 countries. If this is the pinnacle for the sport, it is more so perhaps locally for three Victorians who are involved, and for Canada, because the Canadian team, in the words of former team manager Fred Usher, is "the best we've taken yet."

Usher is one of the deeply involved Victorians. He is attending the championships as an international judge and also Canadian representative to the World Archery Congress.

The others are two city-women, Wanda Allan, 20, will lead the Canadian team, having topped the trials here last month, and Mrs. Gerri Cosgrove, a housewife and mother of two, will go as No. 2, having finished in that placing in the trials.

Wanda, although just out of her teens, is the more experienced. She has been shooting for nine years and won four consecutive national junior championships before entering senior company where she has been runner-up to the Canadian title for the past two years.

A Novice 3½ Years Ago

Mrs. Cosgrove is a convert of only 3½ years and a graduate of Usher's indoor class at Henderson Park. She has developed quickly being Island and B.C. indoor champion in 1974 and 1975. She is also the present Canadian indoor champion.

And just how does one get interested in archery? "Well," said Mrs. Cosgrove, "my husband had been shooting for a year, he had asked me to join him, the children were getting older, we didn't have a baby-sitting problem, I didn't want to stay home, and that's how it all began."

"Practice and concentration are the keys to success," she believes, and since her selection to the national team she has been averaging about five workouts a week, two hours each drill, and shooting 100 arrows each day.

"I do my training by arrows," she explained. "I like to shoot 100 because at Interlaken we will be shooting 72 each day for four days."

bill walker

Nervous? "Sure I am," she admitted. "If you're not nervous you just don't care." And how is she shooting now, compared to earlier this year? There was a pause ... and then perhaps a significant ... "fine" ... and "better than before."

And what happens to a husband of a national team member? "Oh, he's coming with me," she said, "and we're going to spend a few days over there before returning to Toronto for the nationals July 6-11."

'The Voice of Archery'

Usher's optimism should be well founded, because it is his third world championship. He was at York, England, in 1971, as team manager and again at Grenoble in 1973, Canada finished third as a team at York and Wayne Pullen of Dorchester, Ont., a member of this year's men's team, was third individually.

Other members of the women's team are extremely capable in their own right. Joan McDonald of Toronto, for example, is a former national team competitor and Lucille Lesard of Quebec is the reigning women's world field champion, having won that honor at the tender age of 17 in Yugoslavia last year.

On the men's team, besides Pullen, are Roger Lemay of Boisbriand, Que., Ron Lippert of Kitchener, Ont., and David Mann of Vancouver. Lippert and Mann are just 18.

And it is the presence of those three teen-agers and of course, three B.C. members, which pleases Usher most. Because as he says "it is also an excellent forerunner for the Olympics." And if as a judge, it is decreed that he be impartial at Interlaken, don't bet that he won't be basking in the pride of accomplishment if one of the Canadians, or the team, just happens to come up big, or near the top in the world.

As for the Olympics, Usher will occupy a unique role but one to which he is ideally suited.

"I'm going to be 'the voice of archery'," he deadpanned. As if that will be any different.

Grass Courts Stymie Seeds

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — Wimbledon favorite Jimmy Connors of the United States was beaten in the quarter-finals of a $108,000 international tennis tournament Thursday as two other seeds also fell by the wayside.

Connors was defeated by compatriot Roscoe Tanner, 7-5, 6-3, as players struggled to familiarize themselves with grass courts.

Also out of contention after the quarter-finals were 1974 Canadian Open champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and American Arthur Ashe, seeded No. 2 and 3 here.

Vilas seemed troubled by the grass court and he went down, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5, to Australian Phil Dent while Ashe was toppled, 6-3, 6-4, by Australian veteran Tony Roche.

to the league, had earlier picked 14 players from the Chicago roster but there were still 56 names from the two dead clubs in Thursday's draft.

Hees and Kane have both cleared 16 feet. Kane has also represented Canada in international competition and can boast of a solid intercollegiate career at Simon Fraser University.

They are just three of the 1,036 athletes who have entered

However, several players, such as Gil Perreault, are under contract to NHL clubs and were only names on the Baltimore and Chicago protected lists. Also included commitments. However, Vern Black was back in uniform for the first time in four years.

All-Star Change Due

MONTREAL (CP) — George Reed, president of the Canadian Football League Players' Association, and league commissioner J. J. Gaudaur agreed Thursday that the time has come to rethink the formula for the league's annual all-star game.

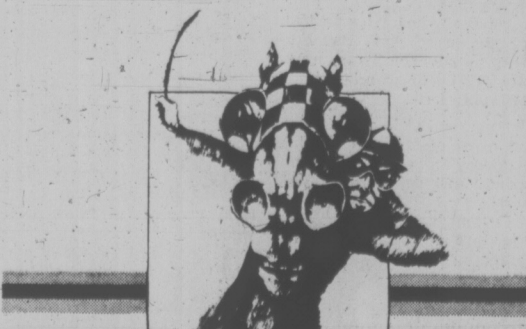

Reed and Gaudaur both expressed disappointment that this year's event, scheduled here next Tuesday between a team of league all-stars and the defending Grey Cup champion, Montreal Alouettes, had to be cancelled because of lack of fan support.

The event has been staged by the players' association since 1970 in the home of the defending Grey Cup champions. Proceeds from the game go toward the players' pension fund.

But Reed and Gaudaur, both spoke of games pitting all-stars from the Eastern Football Conference against their counterparts from the Western Conference in future years. Reed suggested the site of the annual game be switched annually between Eastern and Western C.F.L. cities.

The players' association began to run the game in 1970, and the first venture was a success with a profit of more than $25,000 and an Ottawa attendance of 24,000. But 1971 was a break-even year when Montreal turned out only 9,000 fans. Fair success followed in Calgary and Hamilton the next two years, but $24,000 was lost in Ottawa last year.

And with fewer than 100 tickets sold, a big financial loss seemed certain this year if the game hadn't been cancelled.

DIANE DENOYER

Lake Dampens Diane's Bid

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Diane Denoyer's bid for glory in the Victoria women's golf championship ended with a superstitious splash Thursday.

That sent Eileen Anderson of Colwood marching into today's final against Dorothy DeGirolamo of Gorge Vale.

Mrs. Anderson defeated Miss Denoyer, No. 3 and 2, while Mrs. DeGirolamo came from behind to beat Gorge clubmate Shirley Naysmith, two up, in Thursday's semifinals at Glen Meadows Golf Club.

"I'm superstitious," said Miss Denoyer, a personable 24-year-old who is a comparative newcomer to the district golf scene. "When things are going good, I don't like to change anything."

Diane sensed she was "in trouble" when she pulled an approach shot to the 12th green into a nearby reservoir. She had to make a change and bring a new ball into play.

All square after 11 holes, Mrs. Anderson pulled ahead as a result of the penalty stroke to Diane. Last year's finalist also won the next two holes and went on to end the match on the 16th.

Playing in the city tournament for the first time, Miss Denoyer reached the semifinals by upsetting Uplands' Diane Phillips on Wednesday.

Miss Denoyer started golfing in the Okanagan and joined Glen Meadows when she moved here two years ago. She's a 15 handicap with a solid swing and an excellent putting touch.

"She'll be back to win this," said Mrs. Anderson, who was especially impressed with Diane's putting.

Mrs. Anderson, as always, was a portrait of steadiness. Mrs. DeGirolamo had to overcome an early driving problem to eliminate Mrs. Naysmith, a five-time champion and a friend from their junior days. Dorothy's problem was "pulling all my wood shots" on the first nine.

"If Shirley putted better, I wouldn't have been in the game," said the four-handicapper.

Three down at the turn after scoring an approximate medal of 43, Mrs. DeGirolamo scored an impressive 39 on the back nine to fashion the comeback.

Fairly Decent Forecast On Salmon-Fishing Front

Sport salmon fishermen around the southern end of Vancouver Island can look forward to some fairly decent pickin's this weekend.

Again, it is the Sooke-Beecher Bay vicinity that is producing the largest chinooks.

Arnie Brown landed a 37-pounder Saturday near Possession Point while trolling deep with a minnow and some other nice chinooks between 11 and 24 pounds have been boated this week near Secretary Island.

Some coho up to five pounds — though few and far between — have also come in.

Tan Mowat topped fishermen working Beechey Head this week by catching a 40½-pounder Monday but Otto Wiggins came close with a 38-pounder taken Wednesday on strip, 70 feet of nylon line and two pounds of lead.

Best time to try the area from Beechey to Aldridge Point has been on the mid-day flood tide.

Pedder Bay's kelp bed is yielding a few chinooks to 22 pounds and Brodie Ledge has given up a few chinooks near the 16-pound mark to fishermen trolling near the bottom.

Charlie Fairall had a bit of a tussle Wednesday before landing a 64-pounder halibut on Constance Bank while fishing by himself.

Stingslides, buzz bombs and strip are being used to boat chinooks as heavy as 30 pounds near Ten Mile Point, the flats near Great Chain Island and the Discovery Island light.

Returns off Wain Rock started to pick up this week in the evenings and chinooks to 18 pounds have been landed on strip or hootchies, two pounds of lead and about 150 feet of line.

Saanich Inlet is beginning to produce some large chinooks. Ron Hatch boated a 36-pounder last weekend near Bamberston and W. S. Stout picked up a 32.5-pounder off the Boulder.

Deep lines with either strip or spoons have fared best.

In Finlayson Arm, things have slowed down a little but some catches of chinooks to 21 pounds continue show up in the Narrows and off Stone House.

Catches of blues around the entire southern end of the Island have dwindled during the past week.

Further up-Island, moochers are landing springs to 20 pounds off Bold Bluff and in Sansum Narrows while smaller salmon of the same species are turning up near Tent, Thetis and Kuper Islands.

Waters off Bates Beach started to produce chinooks to 16 pounds on large white or pink-pearl plugs just before dark. A few coho as heavy as seven pounds were mixed in with the catch.

Fishermen working the stretch of water between the Quadra Island light and April Point are landing chinooks to 40 pounds on surface-trolled bucktails as well as by mooching live, strip-cut or plug-cut herring.

Coho averaging five to six pounds but sometimes tipping the scales to eight are grabbing bucktails and flashlights both in deep waters and on the surface off Cape Mudge.

For the freshwater angler, Matheson Lake in East Sooke has been yielding bass almost to the four-pound mark. The proven method has been to fish from the shore with worms.

Some good-sized trout have been taken in Lake Cowichan by anglers trolling a 50-50 No. 3 Tom-Mack along the dropoffs.

Fly anglers are picking up trout consistently in Brannan and Westwood Lakes but bait is needed in either First or Second Lake.

A summer run of steelhead has just entered the Somass River and one angler limited out with lake-trout and worm in front of the power house on Great Central Lake.

Dark-colored flatfish or flies are landing trout in Love-land, McVoy, John Hart and both Campbell lakes near Campbell River but success on searun cutthroat has tapered off.

NIBBLES: Bob Redgrave captured first prize of $25 and the Dr. Hugh Clarke Trophy during the annual Hugh Clarke derby for Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association on Sunday. His 25.12-pounder was taken near Henderson Point. Alf Joyce was second with a 22.08 catch ($15) and John-Rose placed third with a 19.10-pounder. Hidden weight winners were George Bone, Mrs. Wilkins, Steve Davies, Frank Jenvey, Bert Braidwood, Garry Vaughan, Bert Nex and Karl Leon.

Three Putts Lead To Three-Way Tie

HOYLAKE, England (CP) —

Catol Semple of the United States three-putted on the final green and had to settle for a triple tie for first place in the Newmark women's international golf tournament Thursday.

Miss Semple, 26, shared the top spot with South Africa's Alison Sheard and Dinah Henson of Britain, all with 301 totals. The American, who led throughout the tournament, missed on a 10-foot putt on the final green and had to settle for a 78 in both of Friday's rounds.

Miss Sheard had a 75 and 76 in the final rounds, while her British rival had a 76 and 77.

Debbie Savoy of Montreal was the top Canadian with a 311 total after successive scores of 79 in the third and fourth rounds. Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver had rounds of 78 and 82 Friday for 313, while Dale Shaw of Victoria wound up with a 317 total, which included final rounds of 85 and 78.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

There is nothing more satisfying to an expert than beautiful co-operative defense which, as the expression goes, "really puts it to declarer." An example of this kind of defence can be observed in today's deal, which arose in the 1973 National Men's Open Pairs Championship.

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH		EAST
♠ 6		♠ Q1096
♥ Q953		♥ J532
♦ 9855		♦ A953
		♣ KQ842
		♣ AJ7
WEST		SOUTH
♠ A953		♠ KJ42
♥ A		♥ K874
♦ KQ842		♦ A6
♣ AJ7		♣ KQ2

The bidding:
South West North East
1NT Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

On West's opening lead of the diamond four, declarer made the natural play of the diamond nine from dummy. It was his hope that West was leading from some combination of the K-10 or Q-10, in which case East's picture card would be taken by South's ace; and, in time, dummy's jack would be promoted into a winner. But, on this trick, East played the ten, which South took with his ace.

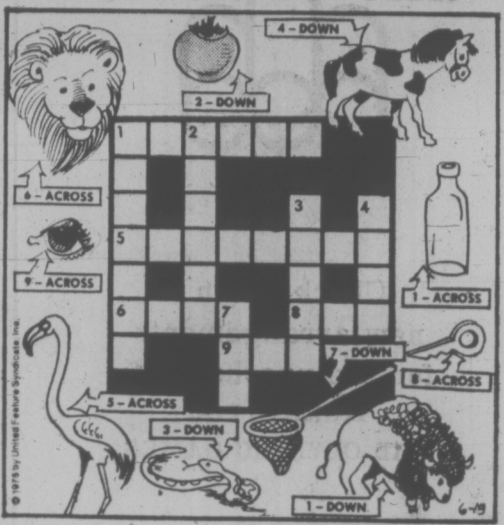

To trick two South led a low heart, taken perforce by West's ace. West now made the diabolical return of the diamond eight. Now put yourself in declarer's seat. Would you put up the jack, and risk losing the trick to East? Now, singleton king or queen? Or would you play low, hoping that East would be compelled to win the trick with the king or queen? Probably you would play low, just as our actual declarer did.

With the eight winning, West now proceeded to cash three more diamond tricks. South, called upon to make three discards, tossed away a club and two spades. West next led the club ace, felling South's queen, after which the club seven was led and taken by South's king.

Dummy was then entered via the heart queen, and the heart ten was led. East refused to cover with the jack, and the ten-spot won the trick. Declarer was now confronted with a choice of evils. He could, of course, cash his heart king, for down two (making only three hearts, a diamond, and a club). But to do this would result in a score of minus 200 points, which is rarely a good score in a duplicate game.

So he tried for a spade trick to limit his loss to minus 100. He led a spade off dummy, and put up his king when East followed with the ten. West took this trick with the ace, cashed the club jack, and then led a spade to East's queen. Thus declarer suffered a three-trick set.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological forecast
Saturday, June 21

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Travel, spirituality, long-range plans are featured. You will be active and member of opposite sex is in picture. Be analytical. Find reasons. Reject superficial explanations. You can perceive potential. It is good — don't be little it. You may really be going places!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Dig deep — permit yourself to express from the depths. Means this is a time when you capitalize on mystery and glamour. At home, there is adjustment, reconciliation. You'll be happier as result. Taurus, Scorpio and Libra are in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent is on ties, co-operative efforts, decisions which bring you together or tear you asunder. One you care for does not have easy time with self-understanding. This is a matter of maturity — or lack of it. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Organize. Tie loose ends. State needs in authoritative manner. Be sure, positive. Get rid of kinks, knots, loose ends and gremlin-type foul-ups. Message will become increasingly clear. An older person proves an asset. Live and learn — from experience.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Lunar aspect coincides with creativity, "falling in love," change and travel. You complete a phase of activity and can take plunge into future. Aries, Libra individuals figure prominently. Personal magnetism is sparked. You attract many people — and opportunities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent is on home, security, relationships with family members. You are given chance to express self in dynamic, profitable manner. You reach conclusions. You get "true story." You know where you stand and what you should do about it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you have brothers, sisters you'll be dealing with them, more so than usual. You could be pulled in more than one direction. This is decision time and it is not easy. However, you learn lessons and you discover how to apply them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You could get money from unexpected source. Key is to be versatile, to give full play to intellectual curiosity. Nothing really is settled. Element of luck is on your side now. You could achieve what seems impossible!

22-Dec. 21): Lunar cycle is high — get going on your own. Be a self-starter. Highlight independence, originality, pioneering concepts. Stress appearance, personality. You have more strength now than might be imagined. You're going to win!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Questions are answered. You are asked to be discreet. Someone wants you to know something of value. Don't break a confidence. If it is off the record, keep it that way. You're being tested. You may be taking time off from regular routine for an "examination."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on obtaining luxury items, winning friends and influencing people. Questions of cost do arise. You get satisfactory answers. Home environment improves. Vacation atmosphere is likely to prevail. Taurus, Libra are in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): What you do may be "on the record." Know it and choose words, actions with special care. Much that occurs may appear to be confidential, clandestine, behind closed doors. In actuality, authoritative sources will become aware of your decisions, recommendations and conclusions.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you may have weight problem but you're considered "sexy." You are due to soon be freed of restrictions. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. In July, you rise above red tape, gain by special activity or study. You will also find love, understanding.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Fran put down her book. "Are you going to sit there all night, saying nothing?" she asked. "You and your figures!"

"I'm sorry, dear," Mike smiled. "But I've been figuring out something about Alan. He's half again as old as I am, yet the digits of his age total only three-quarters what the digits of mine do."

What about that?
Thanks for idea to A. G. Bradbury, North Bay, Ontario.

Junior Olympians Setting Sails

The first of three Junior Olympic sailing regattas to be held in British Columbia takes place at Ganges on Salt Spring Island this weekend.

The seven-race series will be raced in Sabots, competitors being 13 years old or under. Race committee chairman for the B.C. Sailing Association event is Laurie Neish of Salt Spring. Racing starts at 11 a.m. on Saturday and at 9:30 a.m. on Sunday.

The second regatta, a two-handed event, will be sailed in Flying Juniors at the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club in July. This event is for competitors 16 years old and under. The first three crews placing will represent B.C. in the Western Canadians later this summer.

The BCSA's third regatta will be held at the Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific in early fall. This is a 16-and-under single-handed event and Lasers will be used.

Three racing over for the season, members of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club will head for

AROUND OUR SHORES pat dufour

Portland Island Sunday for the club's annual picnic.

Winds were so light last Sunday that CBSC had to shorten its annual Musgrave Rock Race course from 14 to eight miles.

The race was won by Will Jensen's Tiara. Placing after her were Cam Thomson's Cal-Lorri, Steve Meredith's Impasse, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua, Geoff Greenhalgh's Yoyo, Peter Grant's Skaga, Ken Martin's Elacka, Bert Buchanan's Loring Chru and Peter White's White Squall. Tied for 10th spot were Bud Peetz's Sea Quill and John Park's Bonhomie.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, also has a club picnic planned for Sunday. The picnic will be at Albert Head and departure time from Esquimalt harbor is set for 11 a.m.

Good winds made the club's annual invitational race from Baynes Channel to Mosquito Pass on San Juan Island on Saturday one of the fastest on record. Fifteen boats took part, all of them finishing within 92 minutes.

Ed Haines' Lotte of the host club was over-all winner, edging Glen Higgins' Freeway of the Turkey Head Sailing Association. Roger Beaudry's Green Teal of CFSA and Mike Weir's Filey Brigg of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

CFSA sailor Robin Spear passed this one up to compete in RVYC's 21-miler to Salmen Bank and back on Sunday, helming his 30-foot Iguana to victory over boats racing under the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet rating. Second was Don North's Lucky Duck.

Tom Loney's Goodbye was the first International Off-shore Rule boat, edging Hugh Bacon and Rod Andrew's Encounter, George Cesaric's Galey and John Ciceri's Volare.

Bob Gadd and Neal Nicholson's Ligero was the only Thunderbird competing in the Middle Bank nine-miler for T-Birds and Cal 20s, finishing ahead of her smaller companions.

The first Cal 20 home was George Lewis' Sea Faver. Cecil Miles' La Galatea finished second and Ed Life's Semiramis third.

RVYC has another Around-Discovery-Island race set for Saturday. Start time is 1:30 p.m. There'll also be series racing on Wednesday, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Bob Grundison's Owl showed her usual form last Wednesday, ending up top Thunderbird. She was followed by John Thomson's Sea Jay, John Booth's Umpka and Freeway. Mike Smith's Kitwaka won in Cal 20 competition.

The Victoria Canoe Club also has some competition lined up for the weekend, a down-river race being planned for the Cowichan on Sunday.

Stan Luzzi is handling this one. You can reach him at 478-7262 if you're interested.

Whitecaps Defeated In Overtime

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps played their third consecutive North American Soccer League overtime game and lost 3-2 Thursday night to San Jose Earthquakes before 9,424 fans.

The defeat left Vancouver in second place in the Western Division, five points behind the idle Seattle Sounders, who also have a game in hand.

Whitecaps twice came from behind in regulation time to tie the score.

Ilija Mitic scored his second goal of the game at seven minutes of the sudden-death overtime to give the Earthquakes the victory and consolidate their hold on third place.

Will we let Canada lose at its own game?

The pulp and paper industry, and the skilled people who work in it, have always been proud of their products. The sales of these, in Canada and abroad are essential to our economy. In 1974, pulp and paper exports brought almost 4 billion dollars into Canada.

Today, however, others are beating us at our own game. They are developing a competitive edge that is making it more and more difficult for Canada to hold its own in world markets, as well as right here at home.

Why? One of the major—and frankly, touchy—reasons is labour costs.

Canadian pulp and paper workers earn 15% more than American. This fact surprises many people who work for our pulp and paper companies. But fact it is. The average hourly wage in Canadian pulp and paper mills is over 15% higher than in the U.S. and the gap is still widening. This surprising difference has grown up since 1969, even though productivity is generally lower in Canada.

Average Hourly Earnings Pulp and Paper Mills

	October 1969	October 1974	Increase
Canada	$3.66	$6.07	$2.41
United States	$3.67	$5.25	$1.58

Source: Statistics Canada; U.S. Bureau of Labour, Statistics.

These figures are averages. They do not pertain to any one particular job, mill or area. But they do reflect how well Canadian pulp and paper workers have done for themselves in recent years.

There's nothing wrong in that. After all, our economic system is based on ambition and self-improvement. And nobody is suggesting that pulp and paper workers suddenly stop trying to advance themselves. That would be unreasonable and unfair.

But there is a limit. Recent wage settlements in the United States pulp and paper industry amount to approximately a 10% annual increase in each of the next 3 years. Current wage requests in Canada are much higher. If the trend in Canadian settlements since 1969 was to continue, our hourly labour rates would be some 30% higher than those in the U.S. by 1977. That would cripple the industry's ability to grow in its biggest markets, both in Canada and around the world, since there are no offsetting savings in taxation, or in the costs of Canadian wood, transportation, machinery, and materials.

Think for a minute. You don't have to be an expert in world economics to realize that if you can't sell a product, you can't pay people to make it. If customers disappear, so do jobs. That's not a threat—it's a fact of life.

Canadians make good pulp and paper. We've got an enviable combination of traditional skill and modern technology. We have an important natural resource: our forests. We make good products, and we can supply a growing world demand for them. We have a pulp and paper industry with great potential, but only if it can match the toughest competition in the world.

Ottawa-Based Group Defending Animals

OTTAWA (CP) — Because "animals have a fundamental right not to be exploited," a 900-member Ottawa-based group is aiming to have an animal bill of rights passed by Parliament.

Called the Animal Defence League of Canada, the group wants Parliament to enact legislation primarily aimed at protecting animals from hunting, trapping, vivisection and being used in research.

President Peter Hyde said that most legislation now is intended to protect people from animals except for a few paragraphs making it illegal to wilfully cause pain to an animal.

Anticipating at least a generation of work ahead — especially in the area of education, Hyde said the group is searching federal and provincial legislation in preparation for drafting a bill to place before Parliament and in writing federal and provincial elected officials asking support of the project.

More Nanaimo Woe

Nanaimo A and B Construction continues to find it difficult to get untracked in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Once considering entry in the tough Pacific Coast League, Nanaimo absorbed its seventh loss in 13 starts as the smart-fielding Seaboard Construction came out with a 6-4 victory at Central Park on Thursday.

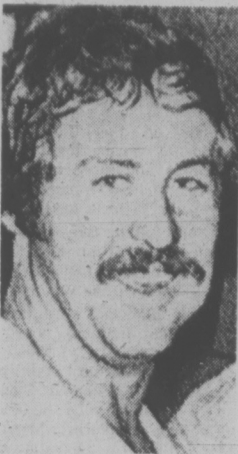

Two double plays and individual fielding gems by second-basemen Scott Sinclair and third-baseman Ken Grexson played strong roles for Seaboard as Nanaimo out-hit its rivals 10-7.

The game was marred by an injury to Nanaimo's Bob Roudot. The second baseman suffered a severe cut below the knee while sliding into second and was taken to hospital for treatment.

Elsewhere, Maxine Stovel connected for three hits while Maureen Schmidt, Terry McKinnon and Lynn Dupuis each added two as Stockers overpowered Y-Not Holdings 8-3 in a Senior Women's League encounter at Hyacinth Park.

Seventh-placed Molsons rallied to upset Webb and Trace 6-5 in a Heywood Avenue Men's League game.

Bench Strength Helps

By The Associated Press
Baseball's world champion Oakland A's have shown their bench strength is capable of holding off any title aspirations of challengers in the American League West.

"We've won four of five and put Minnesota back a ways," said Oakland manager Al Davis. "Now we've got to prepare for Kansas City."

The makeshift A's capitalized on strong pitching by Sonny Siebert, Glenn Abbott and Paul Lindblad and some daring base-running for a 5-2 victory over Minnesota Twins in 10 innings Thursday.

Oakland won the final four games of the five-game set, which left the Twins eight games behind.

"We've got to be thankful we could win this game resting some of our guys," said Davis, who rested Bert Campaneris, Gene Tenace and Billy Williams and used Reggie Jackson as the designated hitter. However, Ted Martinez, Ray Fosse and Angel Mangual filled in capably.

In other American League games Thursday night, New York Yankees beat Detroit Tigers 9-2 and Texas Rangers defeated Chicago White Sox 5-3.

Minnesota's only runs were scored in the second inning when outfielders Bill North and Claudell Washington allowed Steve Brye's lazy fly ball to left-centre field fall between them as they stared at each other. John Briggs then walked and both baserunners scored on Glenn Borgmann's double.

A throwing error by losing pitcher Jim Hughes in the first inning set up Oakland's first two runs and his wild pitch in the 10th let in the winning runs.

Joe Rudi hit his ninth home run of the year to cap Oakland's three-run 10th inning.

Pitcher Jim (Catfish) Hunter retired the first 17 batters and finished with an eight-hit while Roy White drove in five runs with a homer and a single to lead New York over Detroit.

The Tigers' first baserunner off Hunter, 30-6, was Tom Veryzer, who homered with two out in the sixth.

Remember Holiday fun with Polaroid cameras from Woodward's

Polaroid's New SX-70 Model 3

Now Polaroid has made it possible for more people to afford an SX-70. Instead of a brushed chrome finish and leather, Model 3 has a black plastic finish trimmed in brown porvair. And it has a different viewing system. (You don't focus through the lens, you set the distance.) But all the other history-making features of the SX-70 system are still there, right down to the big, beautiful pictures developing in minutes before your eyes. Come in and see one today.

Polaroid SX-70 Model 2

Come in and see the revolutionary new Polaroid SX-70 Model 2. It costs less than the original SX-70 but the difference is only skin-deep — it will do everything the deluxe SX-70 can do. Instead of brushed chrome and genuine leather, the Model 2 is finished in ivory plastic and porvair.

Polaroid's Super Shooter

Here's the fantastic new camera from Polaroid that uses six different types of Polaroid film. All you do is insert the film pack and the viewfinder automatically adjusts to the film format. Save money with economical square format film or get big 3 1/2 x 4 1/4 inch pictures. Super Shooter has these features: electric eye and electronic shutter, 3-element f8 lens, built-in flash and diffuser for flash pictures up to 12 feet with standard or Hi-Power flashcubes, and precision ground rollers.

Polaroid's New Polacolor 2 film is now available. New ultra-brilliant 60-second color film. Woodward's carries a complete stock of all Polaroid films, so come in today and stock up for the holiday season ahead.

Woodward's Cameras, Main Floor

Polaroid Camera Girl will be in the store Friday, June 20th, 7-9 p.m., and Saturday, June 21st, 11 a.m.-5 p.m., to demonstrate the many fine models from Polaroid.

A CHILD LEARNS TO SWIM

This is the sixth of ten lessons in which your child learns to swim. Today, you both graduate from the wash basin at home to a pool or lakeshore, at a depth of about 14 inches.

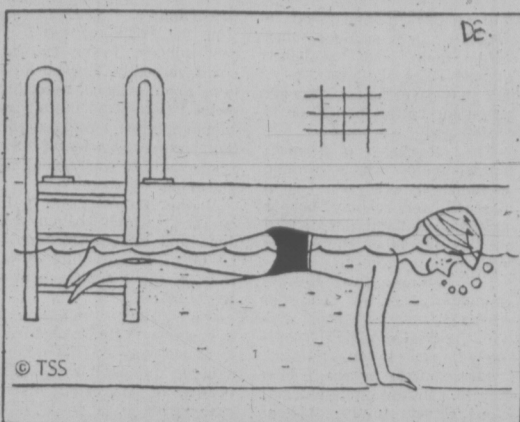

Remind your child now he's seen Freddie Frog floating on the surface of the water — just lying there with no effort. Explain Freddie's mother taught him to relax this way and how cool and pleasant the water feels.

First, demonstrate by doing it yourself. Take a deep breath, lie on the water with your face submerged and arms and legs extended. Stay that way so long as your breath lasts.

Now, suggest the child lie on the water. Tell him he's going to lie on it, not in it. Let him put his hands on the bottom to support his weight and keep his face under water as long as his breath lasts. Suggest he breathe out while his face is under water.

Next, tell him he can move his body forward by pushing back with his hands until his arms rest by his sides. He'll like the forward motion and the progress he's making — actually swimming! Hey, everybody, look at me! I'm better than Freddie Frog!

Poor Man's Route To Fine Garden Through Cuttings

MOTHER EARTH NEWS

Although it does take a little longer that way, starting trees, vines and ornamentals from cuttings is the poor man's route to owning fine and expensive yard and garden specimens.

Most plants can be multiplied from cuttings if — in the spring — you clip the stems from last year's wood and — the fall — you take the sprigs from the current season's growth.

Some folks swear by dipping a cutting into a rooting hormone, others swear at the idea... you'll just have to experiment and find out which approach (dipping or not dipping) works best for you. Either way, put each new start in a glass jar of moist sand or vermiculite and cover the container with a piece of plastic film or a lid.

Cuttings from roots much faster when kept in a humid (not wet) environment. If it gets too damp inside the jar and mold begins, to form, uncover the container for brief periods to allow some drier air to enter.

After a new start has rooted well and is putting forth third and fourth leaves or branches, set it outside in a protected, half-shaded spot. Once the plant is well established, you can transplant it wherever you want.

Mexico IWY Session Biggest

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The biggest global gathering of its kind began here Thursday when the world conference of the International Women's Year convened, with an estimated 10,000 women attending the meetings.

Some of the world's best-known names will be among them, including two and maybe three chiefs of state, the wives of seven presidents or prime ministers, Fidel Castro's sister-in-law and the Shah of Iran's sister, who is rumored to be the financial "angel" of the party with a secret donation of $500,000.

Their presence automatically poses major security problems for Mexican authorities.

Others expected include U.S. political activists Angela Davis and Jane Fonda and "women's lib" personalities Betty Friedan and Gloria Steinem.

Sponsored by the United Nations on a $1.7 million bankroll as the highlight of IWY, the stated aim of the two-week conference is to advance women's rights and equality with men in furthering world economic development and strengthening peace.

But there is general expectation that the meeting may stray away from the narrow theme of women's rights into another shrill confrontation between industrial and third world nations over demands by the latter for a "new economic order".

The meeting is divided into two main segments—an official, government-level parley, which comprises the so-called "world conference" and an unofficial, non-government congress, billed as the "International Women's Year Tribune."

The two sessions will be meeting simultaneously but in different parts of the city through July 2.

Mexican Attorney General Pedro Ojeda Paullada, Mexican co-ordinator for the gathering, said there may be 2,500 delegates at the official session, which will be opened by UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and addressed by Mexican President Luis Echeverria.

Prime Minister S. D. Bandaranaike of Sri Lanka is a confirmed participant, so are the wives of the presidents of The Philippines and Egypt, Mrs. Imelda Marcos and Mrs. Gihan Sadat. Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi also confirmed she would take part but that was before an Indian court unexpectedly convicted her of election fraud.

Also slated to be on hand are the wives of five prime ministers, Mrs. Lea Rabin of Israel, Mrs. Begum Nusrat Bhutto of Pakistan, Mrs. Whitlam Gough of Australia, Mrs. Beverley Manley of Jamaica and Mrs. J. M. Den Uyl of The Netherlands.

Cuba is sending Vilma Espin, wife of Raul Castro, who is a brother of Fidel and chief of Cuba's armed forces.

Iran will be represented by Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, the Shah's sister.

What is believed by UN sources to be a donation from her was received—under pledge of secrecy by Mrs. Hely Sipila, of Finland, UN assistant secretary general, who is secretary-general of the IWY conference.

The rest of the $1,787,884 earmarked for the conference was made up of donations from 14 countries, as well as $25,000 appropriated by the UN General Assembly itself.

More than 5,000 delegates are expected at the sessions of the tribune, Ojeda said. They will be formally opened by Mrs. Luis Echeverria.

The delegates include well-known activists and representatives of women's organizations. For example, organizers said—without confirmation—that nearly 1,000 women may be arriving from the state of California alone.

In addition about 1,500 journalists, most of them females, are flocking into this capital, not only to cover the meetings but also to hold a separate forum of their own, known as "Journalists' Encounter".

There also is a separate "seminar on women in development" programmed.

Consumer Break Slim In Bartering for Cars

By LYNNE GORDON

Even today, car buying is something akin to horse-trading. It's a sophisticated form of bartering where the consumer's chances of coming out ahead can be pretty slim, simply because unlike the salesman he doesn't always know all the ground rules.

Dealer generally sell cars for about 15 to 25 per cent more than the factory price. Bulk of the markup goes into the dealer's overhead and salesman's commissions but there's still often a margin for bargaining especially in large cars with higher markups.

When a consumer is shopping for price, how can he tell the difference between a genuine deal and the "low-ball" designed to bring him back after he's finished comparison shopping? That's one of the tricks of the trade used by shady salesman in subtle wheeling and dealing.

For example, having decided on the car and options you want, you may decide to compare prices among different dealerships. Salesman A tells you that he could let you have the car for $4,100; salesman B and C both come up with the same deal, $4,500; and salesman D may quote $4,700.

The first appears to be the best deal. But it might not be. It may be a low-ball. In other words, the salesman wants to make sure that you'll come back to him after you've completed comparison shopping in other dealerships. He's making an offer he knows you can't refuse, even though he's well aware that the dealership can't and won't be able to afford to give the car away at the low price he quoted.

How can a salesman get away with it?

Because in most cases the salesman's verbal promises have been meaningless and not binding on the dealership. To be binding, they must be written down in black and white on an offer to purchase and signed by the dealer or the sales manager.

You can't get written estimates for the purpose of comparison shopping. By the time you get anything BINDING in writing, you've gotten to the stage of making an offer to buy. If that is accepted by the dealership, not just the salesman, you're committed to buying that car from that dealership. You've put up a deposit to show good faith—that your offer is serious. The dealer doesn't have to return the deposit if you cancel the deal. You are now the owner of the car and committed to take delivery.

The important point to remember is that the document that's called an "offer" can't be taken back by the consumer if it's accepted by the dealer. Once accepted it becomes a legal, binding contract.

Although Ontario is the only province that has a standard form contract for motor vehicle purchases, all the other provinces have regulations governing the purchase of cars. Some are more stringent than others and some, like Quebec, cover only used car purchases.

To buy a car you need money — and with today's prices, a lot of it. You must know where the money is coming from before committing yourself in an offer to buy. If you haven't made financial arrangements and after signing a contract find that you can't get the money, you may be pushed into an expensive financial situation you don't want and can't afford.

That means you have to shop for money as carefully as you shop for a car. Look at the interest rates available to you. If you belong to a credit union you probably won't be able to beat the interest rate anywhere. If you have liquid security other than the car itself, say furniture or a house, you can probably get a bank loan at a fairly reasonable rate.

A finance institution suggested by the dealer may or may not be satisfactory. Their rates can vary and are generally higher than bank rates. You leave yourself wide open for the highest interest rate with finance companies, whose interest rates are not restricted or regulated by law if the loan exceeds $1,500.

You can shop for money before shopping for a car. That way the bank will give you a limit on how much they will cover, which in effect tells you what price range you should be looking at.

You may however find the car you want before you've arranged for financing. In this case you can sign the offer to purchase provided you make it conditional. Ask the salesman to write in "subject to customer's bank's approval" or "subject to customer's credit union's approval." If you don't get the money from the specified source, you can call off the deal and have your deposit returned.

But should the salesman write in the catch-all phrase "subject to finance approval", you may be facing a financial disaster. If your bank refuses to give the money the dealer will offer to find it for you — and he'll get it anyway or anywhere he can and you're stuck with the deal.

COUNTER CAPS

Did you know high blood pressure increases the work load of your heart? Do you think of tuberculosis as an old fashioned infection that went out with the depression? It didn't! Five thousand cases were discovered in Canada in 1970. Can the regular use of laxatives interfere with the absorption of some nutrients and medications? Yes, they can! How about antacids? What is in them? Who shouldn't take them? Why? Why is a monthly self-examination of the breasts necessary for women? What should you do if you experience oppressive, persistent pain in the centre of your chest? We have explanatory pamphlets on all these subjects and on others such as emphysema, asthma and smoking. They are free! If you have any questions on these subjects don't hesitate to ask me.

Phone us, write us, or have your Dr. contact us, or just drop in — ANYTIME.

Risky Lesson

DEAR ABBY: My wife attempted suicide (with pills) twice. Both times she came running to me to tell me what she had done, so I rushed her to the hospital to have her stomach pumped.

She pulled that stunt again, and I refused to take her to the hospital because I wanted to teach her a lesson. She was very sick on the third try, but she was able to telephone her sister who rushed over and took her to the hospital. Of course, like the first two times, she survived.

Now my wife is barely speaking to me. She accuses me of wanting her dead. That's not true, Abby. If I had wanted her dead, I wouldn't have rushed her to the hospital the first two times. On the third try, I felt that I had to teach her a lesson. Was I wrong?

NAMELESS: Yes. An attempted suicide is a desperate cry for help. I hope your wife is getting professional help, to investigate the underlying reasons for her suicidal behavior. She may make yet another attempt — and succeed, just to teach you a lesson.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have a problem. We both graduated from high school in 1965. Her school is in the city in which we are presently living and mine is in a town 250 miles from here.

By coincidence, both high schools are having their 10th reunion on the same evening! My wife says that she will not miss her class reunion no matter what, and I feel the same way about mine.

We have had all sorts of advice on how to settle it, but we want to know how you'd solve it.

BILL

DEAR BILL: Simple. I'd go to my class reunion, and let my husband go to his.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter, a young woman who had been living with her boyfriend for two years wanted to have a big church wedding. You replied in your column that it was in poor taste since they had been living together openly.

What difference does it make whether two people have been living together openly or secretly? A wedding is for the couple's benefit and not that of the guests. If the bride and groom want a big church wedding, who has the right to tell them not to have one just because others might think it's in poor taste? — MY VIEW

DEAR VIEW: A couple should indeed have the kind of wedding they want. But if they chose to live together openly for two years despite their parents' protests, why should they expect their parents to foot the bill for a lavish, 300-guest extravaganza?

Free for the Asking

By HARRIET HART

The mallard is a beautiful bird which delights onlookers. Every Canadian has probably seen a mallard. If nowhere else, then in a park when it waddles ashore from a lake for food.

The four-page folder Mallard describes the appearance, food habits and life history of the mallard, or wild duck.

The male distinguishes itself by its colorful plumage during the mating season. Its glossy head and upper neck are brilliant green. The green head is separated from the chestnut lower neck and breast by a white collar. Two central black feathers that curve back above the tail give the breeding drake its characteristic curly-tailed appearance.

The coloring of the female is less impressive. The back is mottled brown and the breast heavily streaked with buff and darker brown. According to the folder, during the mating season the female is the noisier of the pair.

Students' Achievement Assessed

By GENE I. MAEROFF
NEW YORK (NYT) —

Has the achievement of school children got better or worse? A main problem in efforts to assess the schools has been a shortage of good usable data extending over a long period of time. Thus, most of the appraisals — good and bad — have been based on hunches, not on hard facts.

Some concrete attempts are being made to change this situation and finally to give people some reliable data against which to judge the schools upon which they lavish billions of their tax dollars.

One of the latest entries in the controversy is a report sponsored by the United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). It concludes that achievement has probably slipped since the mid 1960's, but that nevertheless students are doing better than 20 or 30 years ago.

The shortage of benchmarks against which to make comparisons exists not only in the field of reading but in science, mathematics, social studies and other subjects as well.

"Though one can easily find cabinets full of test scores in virtually every school system," says the recently completed report on reading, "these scores generally turn out to contain little information relevant to the issue of the longitudinal monitoring of performance.

In the HEW-sponsored recent survey, fewer students could correctly answer questions about science, according to the results, and the biggest slippage, when compared with their contemporaries of three years earlier, was among 17-year-olds.

Another project is on mathematics, which began last June and expects to provide by next fall a picture of the trend of pupil achievement in mathematics.

"My strong impression is that we won't find a clear pattern one way or the other," said Dr. James T. Fey, a University of Maryland mathematician who is on leave to head the study.

In the absence of definitive evidence on what has happened to achievement, some colleges and universities have come to conclusions of their own. After all, they reap the harvest that the elementary and secondary schools sow.

Complaints have been growing in higher education about incoming freshmen whose writing, spelling, reading and computation are driving professors to distraction.

"I happen to think that the complaints from faculty members about the students' lack of basic skills are valid," says Fred A. Hargadon, admission dean at Stanford University.

One of the responses to the perceived deficiencies has been the so-called return to basics, encouraging the schools to stress the bread-and-butter courses that were de-emphasized when the vogue of the late 1960's and early 1970's was a smorgasbord approach to curriculum.

A tacit implication of the slogan "return to basics" is that the schools have somehow moved away from the teaching of basics and that if there has indeed been a drop in test scores, this is a main reason.

The truth of the argument will be known only if the future contains better systems of monitoring pupil progress than have existed in the past — about which so little can be said with certainty.

Invention for Deaf 'Will End Isolation'

TORONTO (CP) — A $100 device not much larger than a cigarette package that will enable both the deaf and deaf mutes to communicate on the telephone has been invented by three Toronto men.

Rev. Robert Rumball, director of the Ontario Mission of the Deaf, described the invention as "an exciting breakthrough."

"It will enable the deaf to break out of their isolation," he said. "It will also save their lives."

The inventors are: E. Van Douglass, an authority on speech pathology and communications, formerly a research associate at the University of Toronto and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston; James Doyle, a University of Toronto engineer; and William Lancel, a University of Toronto mathematician and specialist in computer sciences.

"It's really all very simple," said Douglass. "We take advantage of the existing telephone network."

A key part of the new system is a touch-tone telephone. The invention is a pocket-sized plastic container that can be instantly fixed to a telephone earpiece. It contains small panels on which illuminated letters rapidly appear to spell out words, much the same as the news is spelled out on television sets by cable TV.

"The invention will give the deaf access to all the people they urgently need for their safety and convenience," said Rumball. He said the device will be supplied to doctors, hospitals, fire and police stations, ambulances and agencies serving the deaf.

In the past, Rumball said, deaf mutes sometimes have died because of their inability to communicate. The device will be manufactured by deaf-mute workers in a non-profit workshop established by the Ontario Mission of the Deaf here. The finished product will be sold at cost, Rumball said.

Mothers Volunteer Milk for Infant

breast for excess milk for Lori.

Mrs. Borges said Lori was weak, unable to eat, and had difficulty breathing soon after she came home from the hospital. Doctor after doctor recommended she try another milk formula.

During the next five months the child got worse — she could hardly hold up her head and gained only three ounces on her birth weight of 7 pounds.

Finally, she said, a biopsy at the Stanford University Medical Centre at Christmas revealed Lori had the rare intestinal malfunction.

It was too late for Mrs. Borges to train Lori to breast-feed since "she had gotten used to the bottle." Doctors put Mrs. Borges in touch with a group of women who had established a mother's milk bank.

With two weeks of breast feeding, Lori gained 1½ pounds. Now she has regained her strength, pulls herself up on furniture and says Mamma and Dadda.

BY DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH
(Dr. Welch is a practicing physician and an associate professor of clinical medicine.)

When the aging, retired leader of a theological seminary and his crippled wife coolly took fatal doses of sleeping pills in a joint suicide pact, their clear heads, their acknowledged religious authority and the absence of painful terminal illness made their action the most unclouded example of active euthanasia or "mercy killing" of recent public record.

There are of course many advocates these days of "passive" as opposed to "active" euthanasia, those who favor the right to die without being kept alive by heroic artificial means. Most doctors have in their files letters from patients explicitly requesting that if they become irrevocably ill, or are no longer able to decide for themselves, that nothing be done to prolong their lives.

But most of us shrink from the prospect of taking positive action to end another's life, even in extremes, much less of ending our own.

If allowing someone to die by withholding treatment which might defer death is a sin, as many feel, it is sin of omission rather than one of commission, as is the case with taking a deliberate overdose of sleeping pills.

The theologian and his wife were not in a depression, which is the common state of most suicides, nor were they suffering insupportable pain. She was arthritic, had had surgery of her hips, but had been able to travel abroad a month before her death. He walked with a cane because of a stroke, and for five years had been unable to speak intelligibly.

In the letter they left behind, they described their act as a responsible one, which "will become more usual and acceptable as the years pass." The letter went on to say, "We are both increasingly weak and unwell and who would want to die in a nursing home?"

Their friends with whom they had discussed their plans were divided in their views, some approving the decision as a rational solution in the face of their dwindling strength and progressive invalidism. Others were strongly opposed for religious reasons, or on the equally understandable ground that the mystery of life and the mystery of death are so profound, and in the final analysis so inscrutable, that the best of man's rational inquiry seems puny and out of scale when we presume to comprehend them.

There is no doubt that the decision they reached was no less than urgently serious, and yet there is something curiously enclosed, highly personal and self-sufficient in assuming the active responsibility for terminating a life, the meaning of which one cannot pretend to understand.

There is one view it from the outside, appears to have been for many years an especially fortunate life physically, materially and spiritually. By their testimony, it was turning physically sour.

Does life have meaning only when we are in proper trim? Is there nothing to learn or understand from adversity? Is adversity harder to bear if it comes only as a contrast to years of comfort and vigor and accomplishment?

What about those whose lives are as the ailing Alexander Pope described his, "This long disease, my life?" It seems to me that I have seen human behaviour under insupportable physical handicap and hopelessness reach heights that can only be called sublime, making one proud to number oneself as a member of the human race.

Is the end of the line so different that one must insist on having it only one way? These are questions I cannot presume to answer. Nor do I know how to weigh one man's limit against another's. But so long as a man's head is clear, there must be a better proposition to put to life than the requirement that I should bear no hardship in seeing it through to its appointed end.

175-POUND COOKIE

BOSTON (UPI) — A ninth grade class at Jonas Clark Junior High in suburban Lexington, Mass., in an effort to bake its way into the record books, has turned out a 175-pound chocolate chip cookie.

The toll house cookie spread across an eight-foot pan and was baked in 48 minutes in the confines of the 3-by-42 foot oven at Green-Freedman's bakery in South Boston.

The youngsters, with the help of a group of fifth graders eager to eat the creation, whipped up the cookie under the supervision of Ruth Wakefield of Duxbury, who originated the ordinary-size toll house cookies.

The recipe for the colossal cookie:

- 2-44 pounds of brown and white sugar.
- 36 pounds of shortening.
- Eight quarts of eggs.
- A quart of water.
- 42 pounds of flour.
- Pinches of rum, vanilla and baking soda.
- 28 pounds of chocolate chips.
- Eight pounds of nuts.
- A group of helpers to stir the thing.

$1M to Kennedy Friend Paralyzed in Crash

people

HYANNISPORT, Mass. — Pamela Kelley, 20, paralyzed from the chest down when she was tossed from a jeep driven by the eldest son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, has received nearly $1 million in an insurance settlement, it was reported Thursday.

The young woman, who fractured her spine in the accident two years ago, told the Boston Globe she harbors no grudge against Joseph P. Kennedy III. She said they are better friends since the accident and she looks forward to seeing him this summer.

WASHINGTON — Sargent Shriver, the 1972 Democratic vice-presidential nominee and brother-in-law of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (Dem-Mass.), flatly denied Thursday reports that he has decided to seek his party's 1976 presidential nomination.

"It just isn't true," Shriver said. "I have not made any decision to run. I don't even have a finance committee, or a political honcho. It would be really ludicrous of me to run without any fundamental foundation or basis to make such a statement viable. I am considering it."

LONDON — Scotland Yard has "positive evidence" the Earl of Lucan, the English aristocrat wanted for battering his children's nurse to death with a lead pipe, is living in disguise under an assumed name.

A senior Scotland Yard detective said Thursday "observation is being kept on a man" who could lead police officers to the 40-year-old playboy nobleman.

MOSCOW — Premier Chou En-lai of China has been hospitalized for more than a year and "has become a kind of prisoner," the Soviet news agency Tass said Thursday.

NAIROBI, Kenya — British businessman Stanley Smolen, who was facing a possible death penalty in Uganda on a boarding charge, was acquitted Thursday, Radio Uganda reported.

He had pleaded not guilty to hoarding cooking oil and soap, an offence which normally calls for a prison sentence.

President Idi Amin had warned that Smolen could face a firing squad if found guilty.

After being freed, Smolen, 38, was received by Amin, who congratulated him and told him that it now is clear that Uganda justice is fair, the radio said.

LOS ANGELES — Wayne Rogers, who has been one of the stars of the top-rated television show MASH, filed a $2 million defamation suit Thursday against co-producer Gene Reynolds.

OTTAWA — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, absent from the Commons since last Friday, will not be back before next week, Charles Beuglet, his executive assistant, said Thursday.

Allmand, 42, is at home in Montreal recuperating from a painful back ailment. "He's been in tremendous pain," Beuglet said. "It started a week ago Sunday night in Toronto."

LANTANA, Fla. — Soviet actress Victoria Fyodorova said Thursday she has received the Soviet government's official blessing for her marriage to an American pilot.

"They said if it's love, we're very happy, for you,"

Fyodorova said about Soviet reaction to her wedding earlier this month to airline pilot Fred Pouy of Stamford, Conn.

Already an applicant for American citizenship, Fyodorova said she wants to be a citizen of both the U.S. and the Soviet Union, living in Pouy's Stamford home and in Moscow. She said she has applied for a three-month extension to her visa, due to expire Sunday.

MIAMI, Fla. — Gloria Swanson, the 76-year-old movie star of a generation ago, is less than enthusiastic about some aspects of modern life. But she says she's delighted to be able to remain so blunt about it.

She is unhappy with the world in general, because "so much of it is sick, and unnecessarily so," she said in an interview. And today's movies don't impress her.

"I don't go to see them very much because I would be embarrassed," she said. "I think what happens in them is so sordid."

One thing does make her happy, "being still vertical while so many others are horizontal."

YAKIMA, Wash. — Honora Ornstein, better known as Diamond Tooth Lil, the dance hall queen of the Alaska gold rush, died Thursday at 92.

Ornstein, a native of Austria, earned fame and fortune as a vaudeville dancer after the 1897 gold rush. She spent the last 40 years in institutions and nursing homes.

Her nickname came from the diamond fillings in one of her front teeth and an eye-tooth.

Coma Victim Awakes

SEYMOUR, Tex. (AP) — Gene Tipps woke up last month, yawned, looked around and discovered the hippie movement with its flower children was gone.

The Vietnam war was over. His old girl friends were married and had children. He was looking for flat-top haircuts and 25-cent gas.

"I know I'm 28, but to me, I'm still 20," says Tipps who "awoke" after eight years of almost constant sleeping. Tipps was critically injured in a one-car accident May 21, 1967. He was suffering from shock and acute swelling of the brain associated with trauma.

He was in coma for three weeks following the accident and after he came out of the coma, he suffered from complete amnesia.

Dr. C. M. Randal, who performed a routine gall bladder operation on Tipps last May 16, said that following the accident, Tipps was unresponsive, unco-operative and wanted to sleep 17 hours a day.

While recuperating from the gall bladder surgery last month, Tipps brushed away a nurses' efforts to give him some medication and snapped out of his eight-year daze. He thought he had been asleep two weeks.

"There's no medical explanation," Dr. Randal said. He said the gall bladder operation had nothing to do with Tipps' waking up.

PAIR SURVIVES 13-DAY DRIFT

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — They had been drifting in a life raft in the Gulf of Mexico for days, and starvation was setting in. That's when Richard Lebo offered to kill himself so the other could eat his body and stay alive.

"No, I ain't no cannibal," Gary Gillespie says he told Lebo. "So just get your mind off that."

In all, Lebo, 36, and Gillespie, 21, spent 13 days at sea in the raft, drinking their own urine to stay alive.

The two Fort Lauderdale, Fla., men had been adrift since their 48-foot cabin cruiser sank just north of the straits of Yucatan June 6. A crewman identified as Andy Carmone was still missing but may have made it to safety in another lifeboat.

A coast guard helicopter rescued them Thursday 70 miles south of Galveston after a pilot for Petroleum Helicopters, Inc., spotted the rubber raft.

"I think it was yesterday (Wednesday) morning I wanted to slash my wrists and get it over with," said Lebo, recalling the experience. "But it was cloudy and cold."

"Man, I couldn't even die in peace."

The men said they drank their own urine because they had no water and only 12 cans of food and several cans of milk. Gillespie lost 27 pounds.

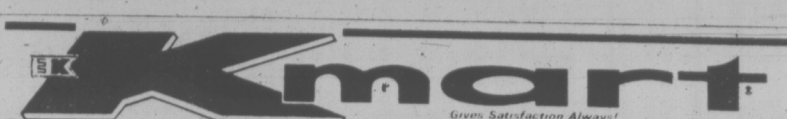

"I just couldn't believe it," he said. "They put me on the scales and I weighed 138 pounds. I haven't weighed 138 pounds since I was 13 years old."

Two days after their cruiser took on water and sank, a Mexican fishing boat passed within 100 yards and another 500 yards but neither would stop, Gillespie said.

"We were really mad, but we figured, what the hell, it's early. Somebody will find us soon," Lebo said.

But no other boats came close. That's when Lebo offered to give his life for his friend. He said Thursday's rescue kept him from committing suicide.

"I just didn't want to go through another night of that," he said.

Before the Judge

A conditional discharge was granted in Victoria provincial court Thursday to a 23-year-old man charged with possession of marijuana.

Roy Jonathon Sampson, 2379 Austin, had pleaded guilty to the charge Tuesday. Judge Douglas asked legal aid duty counsel Brock Emberton to see whether a criminal record would affect Sampson's future.

Emberton returned Thursday with the opinion that a sentence might jeopardize any opportunity of advancement for Sampson, who is employed with the provincial government.

"In addition to his job, Sampson is also applying for foster children . . . the application could be rejected as the result of a conviction on this charge," Emberton said.

Emberton said the offence was an isolated incident and would not occur again. He recommended a conditional discharge.

Federal drug prosecutor Malcolm MacCauley objected. "That the sentence will affect Sampson's future is only conjecture . . . there is no real evidence that this may be so," MacCauley said.

Campbell said the significance of the effect of sentence is at the discretion of the trial judge. Under the circumstances, a conditional discharge is warranted, Campbell said, placing Sampson on three months probation.

Campbell said as much as he would have liked to grant 23-year-old Eva Hewson Law a conditional discharge for shoplifting, there was no way he could.

Law, of 975 Bray Avenue, pleaded guilty to stealing three steaks valued at $7.63 from Western Foods, 772 Goldstream, and placing them in her purse.

"This woman has no prior record. She has been active with her family and also drives elderly people to church and various functions," defence lawyer Edward Rogers said.

Rogers said Law was on medication at the time of the offence and since that time, has secured medical counsel. He asked for a discharge but Prosecutor Nicholas Lang opposed the application.

"I see nothing unusual about this case. Secondly, there is no character evidence or evidence indicating sentence would significantly affect her future. I therefore stand opposed to a conditional discharge," Lang said.

"I'm afraid I cannot grant a discharge in this case," the judge said. He fined Law $25.

"Although Your Honor has been confronted with a lot of requests for discharges these past few days, I feel this case really does warrant a discharge," said student at law Bob Higinbotham, representing Bruce Alexander Watson who was charged with mischief.

Watson, 22, of 215 Oswego, pleaded guilty to breaking the front windshield of a construction vehicle parked in the 500-block Yates June 12.

"A criminal record will have an adverse effect on the accused's efforts to improve himself," said Higinbotham.

Higinbotham said Watson, who has never had a criminal conviction, quit school in grade nine but has since returned to his studies and is completing grade 12 at Camosun College.

"Sentencing policy should reflect the interest of society while reconciling the interests of the victim," said Higinbotham, and the accused has made full compensation for the damages.

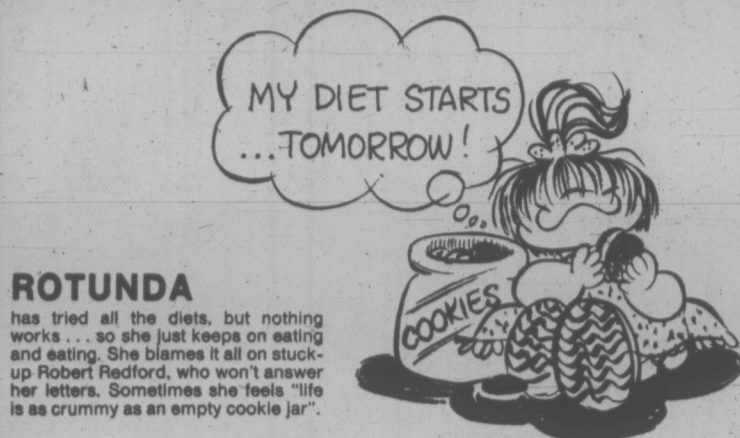

"Again I'll have to oppose a discharge," said Lang.

"We live in a society where people do own property and must be free from the meddling of others," the prosecutor said.

Campbell decided "society's best interest in this case would be served by a fine."

"Mr. Watson is a reasonable member of the community and stands together with everyone else and not apart," Campbell added.

Watson was fined $40.

'Observer' Sees Worm In Big Apple

By FRANK RUTTER

Times Washington Bureau

NEW YORK — Strolling down Fifth Avenue recently, a professional social worker and astute observer of the human condition remarked upon a new phenomenon.

"Just look at how many people you see on the street talking to themselves," he said.

He was right. And indeed New Yorkers have got something to talk to themselves about.

They are muttering about the worm in the Big Apple.

Fun City is now Fear City.

The bumpy pavements aren't lined with gold. They are potholed with lack of it.

The city is caught in its biggest jam, at the height of the tourist season, a financial crisis of frightening magnitude.

The frightening part includes proposed layoffs in the police and fire departments, prompting the controversial campaign by the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association to distribute "Fear City" handbills to tourists and citizens.

The fact that there are also "benevolent associations" for sergeant, lieutenants and captains indicates the proliferation and scope of public service unions with which the city is dealing.

The day that the social worker was visiting New York, the school crossing guards were picketing city hall because all 2,300 of these smart, blue-and-white uniformed young women are to be laid off, leaving the entire school population on its wits to play tag with traffic.

Thousands of Dismissals

Mayor Abraham Beame has announced dismissal of 9,269 city employees by the end of June and a cut-off of funds for agencies employing another 13,746.

Originally he promised to dump more than 51,000 city workers by the end of the month, but he is still dicker with the state legislature, city council and financial sources for additional funds, having got the big brush from Washington.

The creation of a state-appointed financing authority, known as Big Mac, to convert city debt from short to long-term, is only a summer breath of relief for beleaguered Beame. Come October, the city will need to borrow again to keep its $12-billion budget alive.

There is much irony in the sudden falling of the crisis on Beame, elected mayor only two years ago after a career of managing the city's books, starting as assistant budget director in 1946, and rising to comptroller in 1962.

Many cities are faced with similar financial problems but no other city is like New York.

Its streets are kept remarkably clean by a sanitation department better paid than many teachers. Its welfare benefits are so extensive that 21 per cent of the women claiming them pretend they are deserted wives. Its university is free. Many recreational and cultural pursuits are free. Its 35-cent bus system is excellent.

On the other hand, it gets half the eight-per-cent state sales tax, plus varying shares of stock transfer, corporate income, bank, commuter, business, bond sale, and other taxes.

The problem is how to maintain services that are unprecedented on a tax base that is already broad, with little prospect of additional sources from state and federal governments.

Accounting Rules Were Bent

One solution is to slash the services to the knuckle. Unsympathetic Conservatives are in fact almost relishing the collapse of what they see as the ultimate in permissive liberalism. The haughty elite getting concequence.

But New York, and the people who pay taxes, cast votes, and receive services, is more than Manhattan, cultural capital of the nation. It is also Queens, The Bronx, Harlem.

And there is another problem: the way in which city budgets have been administered for years, spending revenues never received. Borrowing on credit that never materialized, transferring accounts to the next year, defying the uniform system of Account for Cities laid down by the state legislature.

No wonder the people are talking to themselves.

The social worker, one David Barrett, premier of British Columbia, left New York, dismayed by the pressures and perils of the American way of megalomania, and concerned that such problems should not flow north of the border.

And yet, it is an amazing city and its citizens are strikingly resourceful.

On the day before the social worker left for another troubled city, London, which has managed to survive a lot longer, there was an unprecedented, torrential rainstorm in Manhattan, dumping half an inch of rain on shoppers in just the first 10 minutes.

Just as suddenly the streets sprouted assorted cherry vendors bearing arms full of umbrellas.

New York isn't defeated yet.

TOWN SLICES LOAVES ... TO A DIME EACH

LYNNWOOD, Wash. (AP) — The lure of a 10-cent loaf of bread turned some stores into consumer battlefields as hundreds of shoppers stormed the bakery aisles in this city's week-long bread war.

It all began Monday when one large store reduced the price for three loaves to 96 from 99 cents.

Six stores were soon involved in price-slashing. Prices dropped almost hourly Tuesday, and by Wednesday bread sold for 10 cents a loaf. It held at that price Thursday.

Many stores could not stack break on the shelf as fast as customers snatched it up.

One store which ran out of bread gave customers who purchased $10 worth of groceries 20 cents to buy bread at other stores.

"It's ridiculous; nobody gains anything and we're all losing our shirts," said one store manager.

Store owner Jim Spaulding said that by noon Thursday he had lost $5,000 on bread.

Customers were limited to two loaves, but Mark Cyphers, who came from Seattle, 20 miles to the south, made repeated rounds of all six stores, purchasing 50 loaves.

He said he bought most of them for friends.

SOGGY CAMPERS and most regular residents were forced to flee from Waterton Lakes National Park in Alberta because of flooding. Jim Calder was one of the last to move out of the townsite, now swamped by water from heavy rains and fast-melting mountain snowpacks. Hundreds more were chased out by similar conditions across the U.S.-Canadian border in Montana.

INFERNO SPARES DRIVER

TORONTO — Police

said a stolen car was pulling a stolen car was pulling on the western section of Eglinton Avenue when it went out of control and hit a power pole.

These things happened:

● The rear half of the car was sheared off, and the gas tank exploded, damaging a passing car and setting fire to two store fronts.

● The front half ran on for two blocks before it hit a light standard.

● Burning gasoline turned the street into a sheet of flame for a few minutes.

Levi Backs $15,000 Pharmacare Spending

The department of human resources spent $15,000 on a campaign to inform Pharmacare recipients that benefits would not be cut back because of the department's $103 million over-run.

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi defended the expenditure in the legislature Thursday saying $15,000 spent to ease the minds of recipients of a $20 million program is totally acceptable.

Largely because of press reports following the department's announcement of the over-run, Levi said, many people were anxious that the Pharmacare program would be interrupted.

The 231,000 senior citizens had to be told this was not the case, Levi said in answer to questions by Liberal leader David Anderson.

The human resources department was swamped with letters from senior citizens, so it was decided that a letter should be included in Pharmacare cheque payments.

Anderson called the letter, sent out in April, "political flackery from the department designed to promote the NDP."

The letter said, "Dear Friend: we are taking this means to assure you that we fully intend to continue with Pharmacare."

In recent months many of you have expressed your concern to us over the future of Pharmacare. These concerns are related to press reports of increased expenditures for the department of human resources."

NEWS BRIEFS

YOUNG WARNS U.S. TRAVEL CLUB

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young today issued a warning that a Seattle-based travel club will have to pay its debts to residents in B.C. before it will be allowed to establish another operation.

"The operators of Aircub (International) Inc. would be well advised, in fact, to keep out of British Columbia," Young said.

Reject Queen's Plea

NAIROBI (Reuters) — Ugandan President Idi Amin, apparently rejecting an appeal for clemency from Queen Elizabeth, said today British lecturer Denis Hills will be executed by a firing squad for treason next Monday. Radio Uganda, monitored in this capital of Kenya, quotes President Amin as saying that the only thing which can save Hills is a visit to Uganda by British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan by the end of this week.

Amassador Ousted

KINSHASA (AP) — The Zaire government has ordered the United States ambassador, Dean Hinton, to leave the country and also reported hampering efforts to reach two American students and a young Dutch woman held by guerrillas in the eastern part of the country. The expulsion order came in the wake of charges in government-controlled newspapers that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency conspired with six high-ranking army officers to overthrow President Mobutu Sese Seko.

LABERGE SENTENCE: 3 YEARS

JOLIETTE, Que. (CP) — Louis Laberge, president of the 300,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor, was sentenced today to three years in prison for criminal mischief in connection with an outbreak of vandalism at a factory in 1974.

Laberge had been found guilty by a Quebec Superior Court jury of nine men and three women May 30 of inciting workers to sabotage appliances at Hupp Canada Ltd. in nearby L'Assomption, Que., during a wage dispute.

Handing down the sentence today, Superior Court Justice Marcel Nicholas said he had decided on a prison term to set an example in light of the violence that has marked labor disputes in the province.

Laberge is free on bail pending an appeal initiated following his conviction. The charge against Laberge arose from vandalism that caused $30,000 worth of damage to appliances at the Hupp Canada plant after the labor leader had addressed company workers at a meeting on May 29, 1974.

Hostage 'Got Hysterical And Started to Cry'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mary Steinhäuser, 32, shot to death when 14 fellow hostages ended a 41-hour siege by three convicts at British Columbia Penitentiary, apparently realized the uprising was planned.

Evidence given Thursday at the Farris inquiry into the siege, disclosed that Miss Steinhäuser appeared to be "getting a bit hysterical and started to cry" two hours before she was killed.

She was the most closely guarded of the 15 hostages, all of them penitentiary employees.

Penitentiary officials thought they had halted the uprising at 11 p.m. June 10, but two hours later Miss Steinhäuser was killed when guards stormed the siege area in the penitentiary grounds after the hostages turned on their knife-wielding captors.

The federal inquiry, headed by Mr. Justice John L. Farris of the British Columbia Court of Appeal, was adjourned to Monday to allow counsel for some of the hostages to prepare himself.

A transcript of a final briefing and policy meeting held by prison officials and negotiators was presented Thursday, along with previous recorded sessions.

Douglas McGregor, assistant Pacific region director of the Canadian Penitentiary Service, said at the final meeting:

"Mary for one appears to be getting a bit hysterical and started to cry and caused enough concern that (All) Hadvick (a prison official observing the hostage area) thought that she might not be prepared to go along with the others and might even put the kiwibush (kibosh) on if something got started. The decision was to stop them from doing anything foolish on their own or get something started in there. It could start a blood bath."

In response to that statement, penitentiary director Dragan Cernetic commented, according to the transcript:

"In fact the alternatives were quite explicitly stated. If action is taken by the hostages within the walls then we would have to move; we have no damn choice. But we are not to start any action."

Mr. McGregor answered: "Well they seem to be taking voluntarily far too much nollard and other tranquilizers, which is rather peculiar behavior of the hostages in some respects and I guess it's because of the increased tension."

The transcript also quotes Mr. Cernetic telling the policy meeting on the last night of the siege that "if injuries or death occurs we will go in without mercy; otherwise we negotiate."

Two of the prisoners, Andrew Bruce, 26, seriously wounded in the shooting and Claire Wilson, 26, made phone calls the last night from the siege area, and made identical statements:

"Either we are dead tomorrow or we are free."

Sentinels Needed to Battle 'Inevitable' Oil Spills

Times Staff

The Canadian Navy should have ships permanently stationed at Victoria, Port Renfrew and in Barkley Sound ready to fight massive oil spills, says Lofty Coning, former Royal Navy officer who teaches sea lore and maritime history at Camosun College.

Warning oil spills are inevitable when the United States opens its oil tanker route from Alaska to refineries on the Washington side of the Straits of Juan de Fuca, Coning said.

"Pollution-fighting equipment should be stockpiled at Victoria, Port Renfrew and Barkley Sound. These shouldn't be store depots but coastal minesweepers with equipment aboard and ready to move when needed."

Coning, who says he was "in the RN when those who went to sea were sailors," says the Canadian navy is lacking in materials and know-how when it comes to fighting oil pollution.

"As Canada's navy hasn't any oil to go to sea, it should be given training right now on how to combat oil pollution."

There are six minesweepers at Esquimalt being used for junior officer training. All are slated for refits, beginning this fall, at a cost of $1.5 million.

Coning faulted the federal government for being unresponsive to British Columbia's plea for assistance in seeking American co-operation on minimizing the danger of oil pollution.

"There will be endless possibilities for disaster," Coning warned. "(Premier Dave) Barrett made a very cogent plea to the federal government but it fell on deaf ears. We're too far from Ottawa."

Coning said Canada should be leading the way in international negotiations, using agencies like the United Nations' International Marine Consultative Organization to hammer out controls.

In the rush to build tankers, Coning said the tanker charter market has become glutted and there is a danger that older, unsafe tankers could be sold to countries using "flags of convenience" — registered ships that are often commanded and manned by inexperienced seamen.

To make as fat a profit as possible, Coning said oil companies have tankers built that are underpowered and unable to manoeuvre because they have only one propeller, making them into "floating islands."

Some of the larger tankers take as long as 30 minutes and a distance of 10 miles to stop, Coning said. Because of this problem, the IMCO is trying to amend the rules of the road.

"You've got to get out of their (the tankers) way," Coning explained. "They can't get out of yours."

"The oil-producing industry is probably the most unscrupulous in this age. They can make sugar refineries and the nice kind bankers look like your local Avon lady."

Coning said Canada and other countries whose coastline is threatened by tankers should be insisting on at least two controls being written into international sea law.

"No tanker of 150,000 tons or more should be allowed unless she has twin screws, a double bottom, segregated ballast tanks and an adequate auxiliary boiler," Coning said.

And, in order to stop the sale of deteriorating tankers, Coning warned, "No tanker of any size should be allowed to change hands without a special survey."

Pool Matches Up Farmers, Laborers

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Farm laborers looking for work and farm owners searching for workers have a new matchmaking service in Victoria to help them get together.

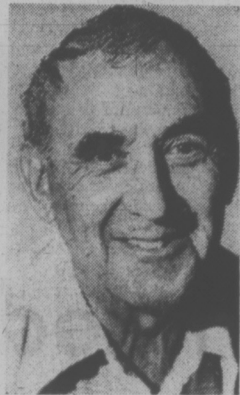

The service is the Canada Farm Labor Pool office that opened in May at 3400 Douglas Street.

Head matchmaker is a tall, personable ex-farmer named Arthur Garcia, assistant manager of the pool office, which is a sub-office of the Duncan branch.

The strawberry season on the Saanich Peninsula opened earlier this week and the office now has about 250 names on its list of potential berry pickers.

The farm labor pool offices are set up under the federal manpower and immigration branch, but local wages and working conditions are established by LAMBS — Local Agricultural Manpower Boards.

Price for berry pickers this year is set at between eight and 10 cents per pound, depending on the yield of the field, Garcia said. The price is set so that an average student picker can earn about the minimum wage.

GARCIA
... counsels pickers

The staff at the farm labor office — Garcia, Gordon Ross who specializes in labor need for berries, daffodils and landscaping, and secretary-receptionist Lillian Smale — don't try to make berry picking out to be something it isn't.

"We point out all the bad features of it," Garcia said. "We tell people that it's hot, they'll be stooped over or on their hands and knees and that there is no piped music around them all day."

The office is looking for registrants for berry picking and fruit thinning, but it will also cover almost every kind of agricultural business in the area — hay, mushrooms, flowers, bulbs, greenhouse crops, nursery shrubs, sheep, beef cattle, horses and poultry.

The office screens applicants for the farm jobs and waits until a labor order comes in from a farmer and then goes through its list to find suitable people.

Garcia said the pickers come from different sectors — housewives, students and unemployed workers from other industries. Unlike areas in the states and in other parts of Canada, the farm labor force here is mostly local, with only a small percentage of transient labor.

The farm labor office tries to arrange car pools of people going to the Peninsula fields and also hands out bus schedules. It is trying this year to have a congregating point at the Saanich Fruit Growers' Association warehouse, on Keating Crossroad, where the workers would gather and then be picked up by the farmer they are working for.

Until this year, farm labor needs were handled through the summer employment office of the Canada Manpower. This year, 35 of the farm labor pool offices were set up in agricultural areas across Canada.

Garcia said he and the staff will try to counsel growers who have problems with pickers, or vice versa.

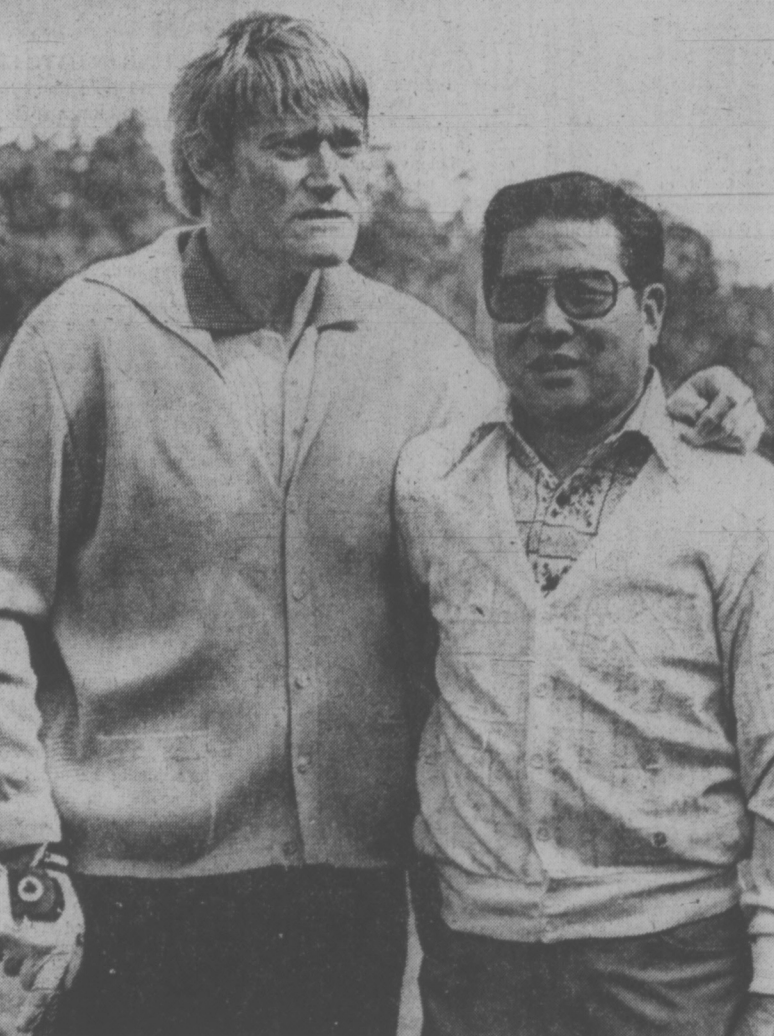

The office will also keep a list of particularly good pickers.

Ten years ago local growers were employing up to 1,000 berry pickers per year. Last year the need declined to 500 and Garcia said the decline is largely due to the importation of large amounts of berries and fresh fruits and the decline in availability of good pickers.

"B.C. farmers have to meet the competition of some of the largest and most advanced farmers in the world," Garcia said.

"Their competition has the advantage of longer growing seasons, warmer weather, cheaper cost of production and the assistance of governments who spend literally billions of dollars to help them produce their crops as economically as possible."

Garcia said the province of B.C. must recognize the importance of the agriculture industry and make sure it remains competitive.

Lake Victim Named

An inquest will be held July 7 into the death of Kathleen Joan Mallory, 20, of 1340 Mortimer, whose body was recovered from a car that plunged into Kemp Lake near Sooke on Saturday.

Sooke coroner Roy Girling will hold the inquest in the community hall in Sooke at 7:30 p.m. Sooke RCMP had been withholding name of the victim pending notification of next-of-kin.

The accident was reported to police Tuesday by Wayne

Lloyd Hansen, 23, of 1890 Maple, who had been driving the car which sank in the lake.

Hansen told police he and Mallory had been attending a dance at Glen Lake Friday night and were trying to find a house party in the Sooke area early Saturday morning.

He said he thought they were driving on Kemp Lake Rd., but instead they were on Milligan, which ends abruptly at the lake.

The car shot off a boat ramp at the end of the road and out about 45 feet, settling in a spot where the water is about 18 feet deep.

Hansen's collie dog was in the car trunk and didn't escape.

Hansen crawled out a door before the car sank, but his companion didn't follow him and when he tried to rescue her the car had sunk and he was unable to find it.

Mallory's body was recovered late Tuesday by Sooke RCMP.

New Sailing For Mv. Coho

Unusually heavy tourist traffic has forced Black Ball Ferries to advance its summer Mv Coho sailing schedule to Port Angeles.

Four round trip sailings will be made each day beginning Saturday, when a 6:30 a.m. sailing will depart from Victoria.

Current sailings from Victoria are at 11 a.m., 3:30 and 7:30 p.m. for the 1½ hour one-way trip.

Hose Whips Woman

A whipping fire hose left an Esquimalt woman with bruises and abrasions when it pulled her from a hydrant and struck her as she walked down Government Street Thursday.

Barbara Ann Jarjmy of 422-531 West Bay Terrace was taken to hospital, treated and released.

Victoria firemen were attending a fire on the roof of the Roger's Chocolates building, 913 Government, which had been reported at 4:44 p.m.

Deputy fire chief Carl Coates said the fire hose was being unwound and pulled toward the building, when for some reason it stopped unwinding and pulled off the hydrant.

The fire, which did about $300 damage, was probably caused by someone tossing a cigarette butt from the Weiler building next to Roger's Chocolates, Coates said.

It was quickly extinguished, although firemen had some problems getting to it because of work being done on Government St.

The Mysterious Valley of the Turtles

A POWER SHOVEL OPERATOR was churning road ballast out of logging country sidehill a few months ago when the jaws of his rig crunched against unyielding rock. In a cut that had deepened through layer upon layer of fractured limestone, the shovelman hadn't expected resistance of this sort. His curiosity roused, he gouged and poked at the shattered face.

As the slabs of sediment-bound limestone shale peeled away, the stone they enclosed began to take shape. The shovel jaws clamped in a solid grip on the rock that wouldn't be crushed. The mass they heaved out of the past into the light of the present was so incredible as to defy belief.

It had the shape, and carried the shell pattern, of a gigantic turtle.

That object and the others of its kind which have emerged from the sidehill at the edge of alpine terrain have posed a question. Just what are they? Fossilized monsters of earth's Triassic age, or merely outlandish rock formations?

We first heard about the Valley of the Turtles from a prospector friend whose sleuthings take him deep into the Vancouver Island hinterland.

"Whatever those things are," Bob told us, "they've been around a long time. Give or take, I'd say about 180 million years."

Here, I suspected, was a Vancouver Island tall tale from the fantasy-catalogue that includes the sidehill gouger, the sea serpent and the hairy white giant.

Bob and his wife Peggy, partners on inback expeditions these many years, stopped by a couple of days later. Bob produced a color photograph. In the foreground, an arrestingly-contoured hump of dark stone rested on a bed of crushed rock. Add flippers and reptilian head, and here was a turtle or land tortoise to life.

But what a creature! It loomed enormous.

"That specimen is about five feet long and four across the curve," Bob said mildly. "How'd you two like to go in for a look at it?"

We set out for the valley early on a Sunday morning — three trucks and our hard-used car travelling in convoy.

In the party were two prospectors: Bob and the friend who had introduced him to the haunted nook among the sidehills a few days earlier. We brought our wives. The expedition had a picnic air. We climbed by a bewilderment of logging roads that grew progressively narrower, putting the populated coastal strip behind us.

The big, lone land that swallowed us lifted and swelled from ridge to ridge. It was clothe d with evergreen second growth that has healed the logging scars of years gone by. Fresh bear droppings showed on the road. This is home to the black bear and cougar, the elk and the deer.

Yet, another turnoff. We poked along a grade that wound its way through a stand of first-growth hemlock — eased around a bend — and were confronted by one of the strangest spectacles ever to amaze these eyes.

Turtles! That was my first startled conclusion. The fossilized shapes of sea-dwellers that had died here before man shambled his way upon earth.

The first manifestation was a cairn of sorts at the head of cove in which the valley ends. A clever hand with a power lift had positioned two of the hulks on end, set another great curving shell across them, and topped off the monolithic pile-up with yet another turtle-shape.

By rough estimate, each weighed upwards of a ton. Their mass towered over our heads.

For approximately 100 feet along the road edge beyond the cairn, similar shapes were ranged in a casual line. Still others had tumbled down-slope to lie amid brush and stumps.

Others, some of them fragmented, littered the bay where the shovel had chewed into the hillside.

Midway up the black, heavily-calclified limestone face that dropped from the gravel overburden, the strata arched in opposing curves. They traced the now-familiar teardrop shape of the mysteries from the past that flanked the road.

Embedded up there was another of those massive turtle-forms.

As Bob had said, the area was heavily fossilized. Pick up a shard of loose rock, and the chances were that it bore the imprint of marine life that had swarmed here when valley and sidehills were seabed.

Ed, the other prospector in the party, studied a tile that carried in delicate and perfect detail, a trilobite fossil.

"A sea snail," he said. "Part of the feed chain. From plankton to more complex forms."

Like the rest of us, he retained a determined skepticism, even though we wanted badly to believe the evidence of our eyes.

"If those things are turtles and I'm not saying they are — they died here in numbers. The flippers, heads and bodies would rot or be eaten away. The shells would fill with sediment that would turn into rock. So would the shells in time. But we don't know. Rock formations can take mighty strange shapes."

We do know that what was sea became land during one of earth's vast upheavals.

What we suspect, with later inquiry to bolster the hypothesis, is that the "turtles" of Turtle Valley are a set of fantastic rock formations.

"Such pseudo-fossils occur — masses of harder rock found buried in softer accumulations. These can take various aspects. They can even mimic the ridged and plated pattern of a sea-turtle's back."

But we don't know, and won't, until Vancouver Island's Valley of the Turtles is investigated by experts competent to interpret the mystery that lay hidden until a power shovel bit into a side-hill.

At present, the most pertinent comment on the wonders it holds is inscribed on a wooden slab spiked to rough-hewn uprights near the cairn: A large question-mark.

Tug-o-War Symphony Elections

Each of the opposing factions of the Victoria Symphony Society is fielding a full slate of candidates at the society's annual meeting Thursday to fill the 16 vacancies on the board of directors.

Both the society and the petitioners' committee, an opposing group within the society, have sent letters to the 1,500 members listing the nominees supported by each group.

The majority of the vacancies are created by directors who have completed their terms and are not standing for re-election, including board chairman Madge Ronahan. One director, E. M. Johnson, resigned from the board of directors half way through his two-year term.

Three of the nominees appear on both lists of candidates—Terry Farmer, Bill Tindall and Gwen Dowling.

Composer Murray Adaskin, who resigned his board seat earlier this year over disagreement with policy and management decisions of the board, is standing for election and his name appears on the petitioners' committee candidate list.

John di Castri, a former president of the society, is also on the petitioners' list of nominees.

The petitioners' committee letter is signed by Nikola Pavelic who urges the society members to vote for "these men and women who are committed to a democratic and responsible administration of an orchestra which has become one of Victoria's principal cultural assets."

The petitioners' committee sets forth a "program for action" for the society.

The program includes:

—Amendments to the society's bylaws to "guarantee democratic accountability" of the board and to guarantee the members' rights to call special meetings, recall directors and fill resulting vacancies;

—Implementation of the bylaw which makes the executive committee responsible to the board of directors in policy matters;

—Review of existing administrative and staffing procedures;

—"Aggressive" fund raising;

—Expansion of the musical program;

—Increased remuneration to orchestra members as additional funds become available;

—Consideration of reducing the size of the board "to establish a more compact operation."

The annual meeting, which normally draws only a moderate crowd, is expected to be well-attended this year. The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday in the gymnasium of Monterey School, 851 Monterey.

Dow Index Near 1975 Cosing High

The New York market, encouraged by signs of easing inflation, scored its second straight gain in a row in heavy trading today.

Gainers overpowered losers by more than a 3-to-1 margin.

At its mid-afternoon reading the Dow was all but even with its 1975 closing high of 858.73, reached on May 12.

The U.S. government reported as trading began that the rise of consumer prices slowed to a 4.8 per cent annual rate in May from 7.2 in April, with non-food items registering their narrowest increase in 20 months.

For additional stimulus there was the report of the economic forum of The Conference Board asserting that the recession was ending and that marked recovery was in prospect for the next 18 months.

Brokers also mentioned encouragement at the news that a railroad strike deadline had been postponed to July 21 from the end of this week.

Kerr-McGee, which has a major position in uranium, rose 2 1/2% to $94 1/2 on top of an advance of 3 1/2% Thursday. Analysts traced interest in the issue to word that the White House was considering a proposal to transfer production of nuclear fuel to private industry.

Prices on the Toronto stock market moved moderately higher in active mid-afternoon trading Friday responding to a vigorous rally at New York.

Activity by 2 p.m. had increased to 1.84 million shares from 1.63 million at the same time Thursday.

The distance between advances and declines narrowed slightly. Gaining issues led 230 to 126 with 224 shares unchanged.

Nowell Well was up 1 1/2% to $18 1/2, Bank of Nova Scotia % to $46, Cominco % to $29 1/2, Dominion Bridge % to $23, Ontario Realty Corp. % to $10 1/2, and Vulcan Industrial Packaging % to $14 1/2.

Consumers Gas dropped % to $13 1/2 and Du Pont of Canada % to $20 1/2.

Denison Mines rose 1 to $57, Rio Algom % to $29 1/2, Preston Corp. % to $15 1/2 and Roman Corp. % to $15 1/2.

Losses among mines were recorded as Giant Yellowknife down 1/2% to $10 1/2, Newcom Holdings 15 cents to $4 and Camflo % to $13 1/2.

PanCanadian Petroleum gained 1/2% to $13 1/2, Quasar 45 cents to $2 50 and Asamera % to $11.

BO MEARNS of Victoria and her horse The Flying Nun who just last week captured a second consecutive Grand Prix of Aurora, will be competing with other top Canadian equestrian riders in the Lord Dufferin Grand Prix event, to be telecast live via Telesat, at 4 p.m. on Sunday on Channel 2. In the last few years, Mrs. Mearns (nee Cuppage) has been winning prize after prize with her high jumping horse, The Flying Nun, bought seven years ago for $400. She recently turned down an offer of $30,000 for the horse and says "I bought her because she had weird ears." Some ears, some horse, some rider!

Movies

GH! (xx) on 11 at 2. A 1966 children's drama about a boy's love for a renegade dog.

Monterey Pop (xxx), on 5 at 2:30. A terrific 1969 documentary film for fans of contemporary music, with many leading artists and recording groups shown in action at the Monterey International Pop Festival. Some of the performers include Janis Joplin, Jimi Hendrix, Jefferson Airplane and Ravi Shankar.

The Spy Killer (xx), on 7 at 6:30. Predictable 1969 espionage thriller starring Robert Horton as an ex-British agent who earns his living as a shady private eye. Jill St. John and Sebastian Cabot co-star.

The Phantom of Hollywood (xx), on 12 at 7:30. Jack Cassidy and Broderick Crawford star in this 1974 made-for-television drama about a masked maniac out to destroy the invaders of his home—a decaying movie studio back

Mary, Queen of Scots (xxx), on 5 and 8 at 9. A lavish 1971

GLENDIA JACKSON
... on 8 at 9 p.m.

British-made historical drama with Vanessa Redgrave and Glenda Jackson portraying two of the world's most fascinating and strong-willed monarchs—England's Protestant Queen Elizabeth (Miss Jackson) and her Catholic cousin, Scotland's Mary Stuart (Miss Redgrave). Their clash of wills culminates in two powerful—though probably historically inaccurate—face-to-face confrontations.

One Is a Lonely Number, on 7 at 11. An unpreviewed made-for-television soap drama about a young divorcee trying to adjust to single life's style, starring Trish Van Devere (real-life wife of George C. Scott), Monte Markham, Janet Leigh and Melvyn Douglas.

Goin' to Town (xxx), on 11 at 11. Mae West is at her satirical and sexy best in this 1935 comedy. She plays the wealthy widow of an oil tycoon trying to break into high society, and she charms men by the score.

Mary, Queen of Scots (xxx), on 6 at 11:15. (See earlier this evening for details.)

The Bad and the Beautiful (xxxx), on 12 at 11:30. An excellent 1953 drama about ambition and success in the movie capital of the world—Hollywood—focusing on one ruthless producer, superbly played by Kirk Douglas, who touches and affects the lives of many people. Gloria Grahame won an Oscar for her portrayal of a Southern belle, and Lana Turner gives one of her finest dramatic performances in this memorable film, recommended.

Madam Sin (xx), on 2 at 11:40. Bette Davis plays an oriental villainess in this beautifully photographed 1972 British-made adventure about the kidnapping of a U.S. intelligence agent. The location footage taken on the Isle of Mull and the Scottish coast enhance the performances of Miss Davis, Robert Wagner and an excellent English supporting cast.

Hush, Hush Sweet Charlotte (xxx), on 5 at 11:45. A top-notch 1965 thriller about a macabre murder plot set in an old Southern mansion, with fine performances by Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Joseph Cotten and Agnes Moorehead.

Incident on a Dark Street (xx), on 8 at midnight. A 1973 made-for-TV drama about U.S. attorneys who try court cases against mobsters. The good legal guys (James Olson, Robert Pine) are overshadowed by the colorful badies (William Shatner, Gilbert Roland) with Richard Castellano's performance as a small-time Italian hood stealing the show.

The 39 Steps (xx), on 6 at 1:45. Kenneth More stars in this 1950 British re-make of the 1935 Alfred Hitchcock classic mystery about a young man accidentally thrown into a spy plot. This version doesn't measure up to the original, but it's still entertaining.

Jassy, on 8 at 2:30. No rating available on this 1947 British-made drama starring Margaret Lockwood as a servant girl at a Victorian English estate. Dennis Price and Basil Sydney co-star.

Today's Highlights

National Geographic, on 4 at 1. A documentary about chimpanzee research in Tanzania, conducted by British zoologist Jane Goodall. Orson Welles narrates films of the chimpanzee community illustrating Miss Goodall's findings. (60 mins.)

Days of the Champions, on 4 at 6. Three profiles highlighting the careers of pro-ski racer Jean-Claude Killy, golfer Arnold Palmer and retired race-car driver Jackie Stewart. (30 mins.)

Nova, on 9 at 8. An award-winning documentary by five British filmmakers whose specialty is close-up wildlife photography. Included are intimate views from inside a bird's nest; the interior of a predatory plant as it digests an insect; and a look at the breeding habits of sticklebacks. (60 mins.)

A Matter of Justice, on 9 at 9. A documentary special focusing on the problems of finding—and affording—adequate legal assistance in the United States, hosted by Rep. Peter Rodino. Also commenting on the issues are Alabama governor George Wallace and Sen. John Tunney. (60 mins.)

On the Evidence, on 2 and 6 at 10. An improvisational drama series about how the Canadian laws and courts function. Set in a television studio courtroom, the program uses real-life lawyers and judges, along with actors briefed on their roles of defendants and witnesses. Tonight's opener focuses on the manslaughter trial of an immigrant accused of killing his son. (60 mins.)

Moses—The Lawgiver, on 7 and 12 at 10. Part one of a five-part biblical drama series, drawn from the Book of Exodus, encompassing the enslavement of the Jews in Egypt, their deliverance by Moses, and their wandering in search of the Promised Land. Burt Lancaster, seen briefly in Part 1 tonight, will play Moses in the series' subsequent chapters. (60 mins.)

Levi and the Law, on 9 at 10. A discussion special with U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi fielding questions from students and offering his opinions on the death penalty, gun control, civil rights and other topical issues. (60 mins.)

Sammy and Company, on 4 at 11:45. Sammy Davis Jr. welcomes Sally Struthers (of All in the Family), singer-dancer Lola Falana and Jack Klugman to tonight's variety show. (90 mins.)

CBC Courtroom Series Uses Real Legal Cast

Generally speaking, when a television producer starts in on a new program, he knows full well where it is going and what it is going to prove. After all, to tackle it any other way would be simply asking for an ulcer. That leaves David Pears, producer of CBC-TV's new summer series, On the Evidence, a prime candidate for the milk and bland diet set.

The fascinating series, which debuts on Saturday, June 21 at 10 p.m., is unscripted. It simply starts with a basic premise—that a crime has (or has not) been committed, and the actors, the lawyers and the studio audience take it from there.

The whole thing smacks of the old days of "live" television, with a couple of added features. Even in those days the director and producer knew where they were going, what actor was going to speak next, and what point was being proven. Not so in the On the Evidence series.

Producer Pears says, "You need a director with a sixth sense, one who can almost anticipate the action before it happens." He feels he has just that in Byrn Matthews. Byrn seems to call camera shots with an uncanny ability for foresight, cutting from one actor to another as if the conversation was following an accurate script.

At the beginning of each program, viewers are shown a quick, sketchy outline of the crime. Following that, a suspect is brought to court, charged with the crime. It is in the courtroom that the basic action of the play takes place.

The opposing lawyers, the judge and the clerk of the court are supplied by the Ontario branch of the Canadian Bar Association, and each one goes through the procedure as if there were no cameras present. In other words, the action of the series occurs in exactly the same way as the action in a Canadian courtroom.

For the members of the bar this may be old hat; but for the actors, long-schooled in the rigid confines of television drama, the whole concept is new and unique.

Even the jurors, chosen at random from the studio audience, must behave as if the trial was actually taking place in the austere atmosphere of a court. It makes for fascinating viewing, since no one knows in advance, just where the case may wind up.

The nine-part series covers a number of crimes, ranging from armed robbery to assault, to rape and murder. Ken Haslam, a veteran CBC announcer, acts as the narrator for the shows, filling in details of the vast amount of action which must, due to time limitations, take place off camera.

Whereas a case in the courts of the land may last for days or even weeks, producer David Pears must boil the entire thing down to a couple of hours of shooting. And, that is just the beginning. Following the actual camera work, the program must then be edited to fit into a one-hour, on-air time. Pears and Matthews have called on all their expertise to pick the proper action, to throw out extraneous movement and words, to ensure that the sometimes lengthy courtroom procedures are trimmed to fit the confines of television. It is a big job, but, when it works, as it has in the case of On the Evidence, it is worth all the time and effort.

LAWYERS AND JUDGES from the Ontario branch of the Canadian Bar Association add to the realism of CBC-TV's new summer series, On the Evidence, premiering on Saturday at 10 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6.

The first program, scheduled for telecast on Saturday, June 21, at 10 p.m., deals with the trial of an immigrant from Estonia, who, in a family quarrel, has shot and killed his son.

Coverage of Pele Debut Criticized

... too many close-ups

By JOEL DREYFUSS
WASHINGTON (WP)—If television's coverage of soccer doesn't improve even Pele will not convince the American public soccer is as exciting as soccer promoters say.

CBS paid $25,000 for the rights to televise Pele's debut with the New York Cosmos. But someone at CBS forgot the Cosmos were playing the Dallas Tornado and the national television audience saw mostly closeup shots of Pele.

Soccer is a flowing, moving game in which 22 men jockey for position, move into empty spaces, rush downfield in set formations involving a high degree of planning and strategy. The only American sport with such movement is basketball. But basketball has an advantage because it is played on a small court and can be covered easier.

In football and baseball, the viewer is helped by closeups. But the same technique in soccer reduces the game to a static study of one or two men running aimlessly.

The cameras often focused on players without the ball, or failed to follow the action when the ball was moved quickly. The fascination with Pele resulted in frequent closeups of the great Brazilian at a time the play was often on the other side of the field.

CBS sold 32 commercial spots at $7,000 apiece, causing frequent cuts away from the game.

Because of bad timing, a number of significant plays were lost. A Pele head shot that narrowly missed the goal was only mentioned. There was no instant replay. There was a replay of a goal scored during a commercial break. But many knowledgeable soccer fans felt cheated because the play leading up to goals in soccer are nearly as important as the goals.

An understanding of soccer by television directors and commentators is a must if soccer is to convey excitement. More long shots of the field are needed, showing the deployment of men on offense and defense, and more explanation by the commentators is needed.

Soccer has slowly been developing a solid base among youngsters in this country, but most adults remain ignorant about its rules. Frank Lieber and Ben Wright offered no help on rules, violations or strategy.

Lieber was kind in assessing play. He repeatedly referred to bad passes as balls being taken away. Poor control went unnoticed and much of the rough play—except when it involved Pele—was accepted as part of the game.

During a halftime interview with another soccer expert, Paul Gardner, Wright, who is English, sounded knowledgeable. But he said little during Lieber's play-by-play.

Pele's debut deserved attention on national television, but the fundamental shortcomings of the coverage indicate the public and the players are not the only ones who have much to learn about this great international sport.

NICKLAUS FAVORED TO WIN U.S. OPEN

The Golden Bear, Jack Nicklaus, is the only man with a chance to capture the elusive grand slam of golf this year. Nicklaus has already taken the Masters tournament (telecast on CBC-TV, April 12-13). Next is the U.S. Open, which will be carried on the network, Saturday, June 21 and Sunday, June 22 (2 p.m. both days).

To keep his hopes alive, Nicklaus must defeat the famous "Monster"—Medinah Country Club's number 3 course—and then go on to take the British Open and the American P.G.A. Each of these tournaments will also be carried by CBC-TV.

Whether Jack comes through or not, viewers can still expect to be treated to yet another spectacular golf show during The Open.

Hale Irwin, current holder of the trophy from the 1974 Open, will be back trying to make it two out of two. Among the other "good bets" are 1974's leading money winner, Johnny Miller; last year's PGA champ, Lee Trevino; Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, Tom Weiskopf, Sam Snead, Tom Watson and any one of dozens of others who might just come up with the big win.

The 1975 U.S. Open carries a total purse in excess of $225,000, with a healthy $40,000 going to the winner. Television coverage takes in 13 holes by 28 cameras.

Evening at Symphony. on 9 at 7:30. Selji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in works by Debussy and Tchaikovsky. (60 mins.)

Alexander Korda Festival. on 2 and 6 at 9. A pleasant, sophisticated 1938 English-made comedy about a divorce lawyer and a capricious debutante, produced by Alexander Korda and starring Sir Laurence Olivier and Merle Oberon. (2 hrs.)

Firing Line. on 9 at 9:30. Hosts William F. Buckley Jr. chairs a discussion on the legal and moral controversies surrounding abortion, with a group of pro and con guests. (60 mins.)

WS. on 8 at 10. Segments on tonight's show include a look at government spending; and an examination of the Canadian meat-inspection system. (60 mins.)

Jeanne Wolf Interview. on 9 at 10:30. Hostess Jeanne Wolf talks with playwright Edward Albee (Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf), who offers some criticism of theatre critics, and talks about his latest play, Seascape, which has earned him his second Pulitzer Prize. (30 mins.)

Movies

The Mouse on the Moon (xx). on 12 at 11:30. Margaret Rutherford and Terry-Thomas star in this 1963 English-made sequel to, The Mouse That Roared; that finds the mythical duchy of Grand Fenwick involved in the space race.

Cat People (xxx). on 11 at 2. An excellent 1942 horror thriller, intelligently written and directed, about a man who marries a strange girl possessed with a dreadful spell. It's suspenseful and well-acted by Simone Simon, Kent Smith and Tom Conway.

The Great Niagara. on 8 at 2:30 and 6 at 4. No rating available on this 1974 made-for-TV drama starring Richard Boone as a man obsessed with conquering the falls.

Kidnapped (xx). on 5 at 3. A 1948 adaptation of the Robert Louis Stevenson adventure classic about a young Scots boy who fights his way across country to confront his wicked uncle. Cast includes Roddy McDowall and Dan O'Herlihy.

westerns made by John Wayne during the thirties.

The Honkers. on 4 at 8:30. No rating available on this 1972 made-for-TV drama and the personal and professional problems of an aging circuit rider, starring James Coburn, Lois Nettleton and Slim Pickens. The drama is highlighted by real-life rodeo footage filmed in and around Carlsbad, New Mexico.

The Divorce of Lady X (xxx). on 2 and 6 at 9. Sir Laurence Olivier and Merle Oberon star in this entertaining 1938 English-made comedy about a divorce lawyer who becomes involved with a pretty but capricious debutante.

Act One (xxx). on 12 at 9. If you have never read Moss Hart's sentimental, best-selling novel about his youthful love affair with the Broadway theatre, then you will enjoy this somewhat watered-down 1963 film version. The supporting cast (Jason Robards, Eli Wallach, Jack Klugman) is good but George Hamilton as Hart is a bit too good looking and polished to convey the innocence and dedication of a poor Jewish boy who became a major playwright-author-director.

Kiss Me Kate (xxxx). on 4 at 11:30. A 1953 musical class-

SIR LAURENCE OLIVIER
... on 2 and 6 at 9 p.m.

sic, with music by Cole Porter and a great cast that includes Kathryn Grayson, Howard Keel and Ann Miller. The film is adapted from the stage hit about a theatrical troupe doing a musical version of Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew.

Second Chance (xx). on 7 at 11:30. Brian Keith and Elizabeth Ashley star in this 1972 made-for-television comedy-drama about a disenchanted big city stockbroker who buys a ghost town, and attempts to create a utopian society for a group of people looking for a new way of life.

A Severed Head (xx). on 12 at 11:30. A talented cast (Lee Remick, Claire Bloom and Richard Attenborough) works hard to be sophisticated and chic in this faithful but awkward 1971 film adaptation of Iris Murdoch's novel about multiple sexual indiscretions among the British upper crust. Unfortunately Ms. Murdoch's stylish wit is lost in a poor script.

Monsieur Beaucaire (xxx). on 2 at 11:45. A better-than-average Bob Hope comedy about a 17th-century French barber who finds himself in court intrigue.

Incident on a Dark Street (xx). on 6 at 11:30. A 1973 made-for-TV drama about U.S. attorneys who try court cases against mobsters. The good legal guys (James Olson and Robert Pine) are overshadowed by the colorful bad-guys (William Shatner, Gilbert Roland), with Richard Castellano's performance as a small-time Italian hood stealing the show.

Dead Men Tell No Tales (x). on 5 at midnight. Christopher George and Judy Cagne star in this predictable 1971 mystery about an innocent man who becomes the target for killers who mistake him for someone else.

The 39 Steps (xx). on 8 at midnight. Kenneth More stars in this 1936 British re-make of the 1935 Alfred Hitchcock classic mystery about a young man accidentally thrown into a spy plot. This version doesn't measure up to the original, but it's still entertaining.

Holiday Inn (xxx). on 7 at 1. An entertaining 1942 Bing Crosby-Fred Astaire musical set at a Connecticut roadhouse at Christmas, and featuring the music of Irving Berlin.

Jassy. on 6 at 2:30. No rating available on this 1947 British-made drama starring Margaret Lockwood as a servant girl at a Victorian English estate.

Equestrian Event Carried Live Via Telesat-Anik

At 4:50 p.m. on Sunday, June 22, Telesat's transportable earth station will start beaming the world's first live telecast of a sports event sent via the amazing new equipment, and Anik, our domestic satellite.

The event is the Lord Dufferin Equestrian Grand Prix, and it will be sent across the country from a 32-foot diameter portable dish, located at Orangeville in Ontario. In a matter of a split second, the television pictures of the Lord Dufferin will flash 22,300 miles to the Anik satellite, back to approximately fifty ground receivers throughout Canada, and from there to home television sets.

Normally, Anik is fed from fixed ground stations. The transportable unit now makes it possible to feed the satellite from any location in Canada.

For Bill Sheehan, CBC-TV producer of the Equestrian events, the use of the new system is proof of the growing popularity of the annual jumping series. Initiated last year as a co-operative effort on behalf of Canada and the U.S., the total Can-Am series will be a basis for the selection for the Pan-American Games in October. CBC-TV will be covering the Canadian leg of the series.

Among the jumping team veterans who will be competing for the $66,000 in prize money this year, are Bo Mearns of Victoria, winner of last week's Grand Prix of Aurora; Jim Elder, a member of 1988 Gold Medal team; Jim Day, winner of last year's high point award for the Canadian Grand Prix circuit; Ian Millar, a member of the 1972 Olympic team; Barbara Kerr, bronze medalist at the ladies' World Show Jumping Championships in France; and Moffat Dunlop, winner of two seconds on the 1974 international fall circuit.

Commentator for the Lord Dufferin event will be CBC-TV's Tom McKee, ably assisted by Gordon Atkinson with color comments and background material.

VICTORIA'S BO MEARNs and her horse The Flying Nun, fresh from their victory at last week's Grand Prix of Aurora, will be among the competitors at the Lord Dufferin Equestrian Grand Prix, to be telecast live from Ontario on Sunday at 4 p.m. on Channel 2.

PBS Features Last Interview With Watts

The late author and philosopher Alan Watts discusses the relationship of man and nature on Alan Watts: A Conversation With Myself, June 23 at 9 p.m. on KCTS-9. This was the last television appearance of the popular leader.

For more than twenty years, Watts earned a reputation as author, lecturer, philosopher, and interpreter of Eastern religions. His more than twenty books include The Way of Zen, Nature, Man, and Woman, and an autobiography, In My Own Way.

Watts was a colorful character whose followers included Establishment intellectuals as well as members of the counterculture. An excellent writer and speaker, he managed to bring a touch of informality and earthiness to his works.

Watts, who died in 1973, was born in England and attended King's School, Canterbury. After serving on the Council of the World Congress of Faiths, he came to the United States and earned a Masters' Degree and an Honorary Doctor of Divinity.

Hoax Celebrity Denies Her Glamor Girl Image

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Nina van Pallandt, the notorious Danish blonde of Clifford Irving hoax fame, says she is no glamor girl but a simple homely body who cooks, sews and paints her own kitchen.

But the look of the adventuresome lurks in her cornflower blue eyes when she says it.

Nina, in Hollywood to star in a television movie, was divorced from husband Frederik and quit work as a cabaret singer for 2½ years following the Irving caper with the phony Howard Hughes biography.

She accompanied Irving to Mexico where the author claimed he had met with Hughes. And while her affair made Nina an instant celebrity, she regrets the entire episode.

"That story didn't set at all well with my image," Nina said the other day at Universal studios during a break for tea. Her voice is a blend of the five languages in which she is fluent.

"It was so freaky I couldn't believe it was happening to me. The only plus was that it brought me to the attention of (director) Bob Altman and a role in 'The Long Goodbye'. All the rest were minuses.

"I could have done without the notoriety. Success is not having your picture sprawled in all the papers. It wasn't good for my family. And it doesn't really reflect the kind of woman I am."

Nina is a tall, slender, blonde beauty with a special European savoir faire instantly distinguishable from her American counterparts. She's as bright as she is pretty.

She lives in an apartment in Chelsea with her daughters Anna, 10, and Kira, 11. Son Nicholas, 13, is in an English boarding school.

Nina co-stars with George Peppard in 'Guilty or Innocent: The Sam Sheppard Murder Case' in which she plays the German woman who befriended the imprisoned Sheppard and later married him, to be shown later this summer on NBC-TV.

If Nina's image as an international swinger is misleading, how would she describe herself?

"I am very domesticated," she said. "I do my own plumbing repairs, sew curtains, cook, bake, fix the tile and paint the flat."

"Sometimes Frederik calls me to complain about the conditions of his house and I go over and clean it up for him."

As breadwinner for her brood, Nina must work to make ends meet. She quit singing in cabarets for more than two years, hoping the uproar over the Irving affair would die down.

She had been an established folk singer, touring the continent, Australia and the Far East. She appeared at the Royal Command performance at London's Palladium and sang for Denmark's Queen Margherita.

Now she is prepared to resume her career, but not at the expense of her maternal obligations.

Today's Highlights

Budget Special, on 8 at 5:30 and 2 and 6 at 7. A report and analysis of Finance Minister John Turner's new Federal budget. (30 mins. on 8 and 60 mins. on 2 and 6).

ALAN WATTS
... on 9 at 9 p.m.

Mike Douglas Show, on 12 at noon and 6 at 4:30. This week's show is being filmed from New Jersey's Great Adventure safari park, with co-host George Hamilton and guests Kirk Douglas, comics David Brenner and Jimmie Walker and the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band. (90 mins.)

Rap About It, on 9 at 7:30. A man who was an inmate at the Attica N.Y. State Correctional Facility during September, 1971, uprising gives his views of the event in this PBS interview. (30 mins.)

At the Top, on 9 at 8. An hour-long music special with rumpeter Maynard Ferguson and his 14-piece band. (60 mins.)

Alan Watts: Conversation with Myself, on 9 at 9. The late author, philosopher and interpreter of Eastern religions, Alan Watts, reflects on the relationship of man to nature in this program, taped just before his death in 1973. Author of The Way of Zen, Watts is filmed hiking up Mount Tamalpais, north of the Golden Gate Bridge, and talking from his nearby home. (30 mins.)

Movies

Suez (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. A well-photographed, lavish but historically inaccurate 1938 drama about the building of the Suez Canal, starring Tyrone Power and Loretta Young.

The Reluctant Spy, on 11 at 1. No rating available on this 1963 French-made adventure about a sophisticated young playboy pressed into service by the security police. Jean Marais stars.

Rally 'Round the Flag, Boys! (xx), on 5 at 3:30. Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward star in this 1959 film rendering of Max Shulman's funny novel about the citizens of a small New England town, and their reactions to an army missile base planning to set up shop in their backyard. The characters, hilarious in Three Secrets (xxx), on 11 at 9. The stories of three women are told through flashbacks, as they wait for word of their loved ones involved in a fatal air-crash, is the plot of this 1950 drama, highlighted by an excellent cast that includes Eleanor Parker, Patricia Neal and Ruth Roman.

Planet Earth, on 4 at 11:30. Gene Roddenberry (Star Trek) wrote the story for this made-for-television sci-fi movie, set in the 22nd century, and starring John Saxon, Diana Muldaur and Janet Margolin.

The Sandpiper (xx), on 12 at 11:30. A saccharine love story between a liberated artist and a dedicated, married and confused minister, filmed in 1965 and starring Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton. Even the gorgeous Big Sur location photography can't save this one from becoming pure soap opera.

There Was a Crooked Man, on 2 at midnight. No rating available on this 1960 English-made comedy about an innocent explosive expert unwittingly involved with a gang of crooks, starring Norman Wisdom and Susannah York.

Flying Tigers (xx), on 6 at midnight. An entertaining 1942 adventure drama about the exploits of the pilots who helped defend the Chinese against Japan, starring John Wayne, John Carroll and Anna Lee.

211 Ocean Drive (xxx), on 7 at midnight. Edmond O'Brien is excellent as a telephone worker who joins a crime ring and soon rises to the top of a bookie ring, in this 1950 crime-drama, co-starring Joanne Dru.

Second Chorus (xx), on 8 at midnight. Fred Astaire and Paulette Goddard star in this pleasant 1940 backstage musical, about the members of a swing orchestra. Pleasant, but not one of Astaire's best.

The Trackers, on 8 at 1:45. No rating available on this 1971 western adventure about the hunt for a girl missing in Indian territory, starring

... on 11 at 9 p.m.

Ernest Borgnine, Sammy Davis Jr., and Julie Adams.

The Hitler Gang, on 7 at 2. No rating available on this 1944 drama about the rise of the Nazi leader and his men. European cast.

Shipwreck Island (xx), on 6 at 2:05. A 1961 Spanish-made children's adventure about fourteen young boys stranded on a desert island.

Lord Kenneth Clark

Historian Probes Ancient Culture

Lord Kenneth Clark examines ancient Egypt — the most seminal and long-lasting cultures in the recorded history of the human race — during a one-hour special. In the Beginning, June 23 at 10 p.m. on Channel Nine.

As in Clark's two earlier series, Civilization and The Romantic Rebellion, the In the Beginning special is a personal odyssey in which Clark leads the viewer through a vital and exciting subject area, and adds his commentary to a highly visual study of the lives, art and architecture of a people and their time.

Lord Clark begins the program by noting that the Nile was the focus and the life-giving element behind much of Egyptian life, providing fertile lands for farming and encouraging an order and harmony in early Egyptian civilization.

Tracing Egyptian history through visual arts, Clark begins with the Old Kingdom, a time full of abounding confidence and vitality. He asserts that the women in those days were treated as equals of men, and working people were respected and glorified. Clark also contends that the pyramids have gotten a notorious and unfair reputation: according to Clark, the pyramid builders were paid workers.

The Old Kingdom disintegrated after 700 years because of a social revolution. The Middle Kingdom followed, as vigor gave way to subtlety and refinement. After a Syrian invasion, the New Kingdom emerged. This was Egypt's golden age of architecture, when the great temple was constructed at Thebes by Hatshepsut, the only woman Pharaoh.

Clark reflects on the lessons to be learned from past civilizations: that the long triumph of Egypt depended on a respect for the natural order of things, the husbanding of nature, the sense of renewal — and not expansion and exploitation.

In addition to the major segments filmed on location in Egypt, In the Beginning also includes films of collections from University College, London, the Gulbenkian Collection, and the Louvre, Boston, Metropolitan, British, Berlin and Cairo Museums.

LORD KENNETH CLARK explores the genesis of civilization in the Nile Valley and shows how that civilization is reflected in ancient Egyptian art on the Channel 9 special, In the Beginning, to be telecast at 10 p.m. on Monday.

New Children's Show on CTV

CTV's new children's show, Kidstuff, premiering this fall, has a format created to educate in an entertaining fashion.

The series will feature a group of very talented and musical twelve-year-olds. Using the basic elements of successful children's programming, such as comedy, fantasy and music, these kids, along with a stock company of professional character actors will carry the show through a fast-paced hour of sketches, production numbers, vignettes and other elements of a variety show.

All the music on Kidstuff will be originally composed by Cliff Jones in collaboration with writer-producer Bill Hartley.

The entire show is presented in a framework of fantasy that will allow the group of kids to do anything from walking into a comic strip come-to-life, to participating in a game show, to picking up musical pointers from a far-out Ludwig von Beethoven.

The set is a fantastic world of giant-sized kid-type stuff — oversized props such as a baseball bat and glove, comic books, a gumball machine, dolls, a game board, a record player, a fantastic mecano or tinkertoy machine, a typewriter, paints — everything a youngster would love to have. Against this backdrop the children perform musical numbers and sketches. In addition, the set acts as a continuity device that links the diverse elements of the program together. A hockey card is used as a way into an item on hockey . . . a doll house as the set for a sketch . . . a history book as a way to meet Jacques Cartier.

Elements of Kidstuff will include the use of comedy (running gags, puns, riddles, bizarre twists, slapstick), games (logic and reasoning, magic, secret languages and codes), heroes (sports, TV and superhuman), concerns (responsibilities, attitudes toward others, environment), stories, arts and crafts, television, music, conformity and spoof.

Movies

The Road to Denver (xx), on 8 at 12:45. John Payne, Mona Freeman and Lee J. Cobb star in this 1955 western about a cowhand who tries to keep his hot-headed brother out of trouble when the kid joins up with outlaws.

Edge of Fear (x), on 11 at 1. An overlong 1963 Spanish-made melodrama about a witness to a murder who is hunted by the killer, even though she can't identify him. Spanish cast dubbed into English.

Snow White and the Three Stooges (x), on 5 at 3:30. A 1968 comedy based on the children's fairy tale, highlighted only by some excellent skating sequences with former Olympic champion Carol Heiss.

The Phoenix City Story (xxx), on 12 at 7. Richard Kiley and John McIntire star in this hard-hitting 1955 melodrama about the expose of one of the most corrupt "Sin Cities" in the United States. Much of the film is based on actual news data.

BARBARA STANWYCK
... on 11 at 8 p.m.

The Missing Are Deadly, on 4 at 8:30. No rating available on this 1975 made-for-TV suspense drama about an epidemic that may result when a rat contaminated by a rare and deadly disease is stolen by a youngster who plans to keep the rodent as a pet. Cast includes Ed Nelson, Leonard Nimoy, Jose Ferrer and Marjorie Lord.

Blowing Wild (xx), on 11 at 9. A well-done but predictable 1953 adventure drama about a power-hungry woman trying to gain control of Mexican oil fields, starring Barbara Stanwyck and Gary Cooper.

Suicide Club, on 4 at 11:30. Peter Haskell and Margot Kidder star in this made-for-television mystery about gamblers involved in a deadly card game.

Soul Soldier (x), on 12 at 11:50. A pointless 1972 western about a loyal but dangerous black soldier guarding the Mexican border in post-Civil War America. Ex-Olympics star Rafer Johnson has a certain amount of dignity, but the rest of the acting is rotten.

A Face in the Rain (xxx), on 2 at midnight. Rory Calhoun and Marina Berril star in this better-than-average 1963 melodrama set during the Second World War about an American soldier sheltered from the enemy by the mistress of a German commandant.

Ride the Man Down (xx), on 6 at midnight. A 1952 western about a ranch foreman fighting to hold together his late boss's cattle empire, starring Rod Cameron, Brian Donlevy and Ella Raines.

Bonjour Tristesse (xxx), on 7 at midnight. Deborah Kerr, David Niven and Jean Seberg star in this lavishly produced 1958 film adaptation of French novelist Françoise Sagan's romantic story about a young girl who hero-worships her father and repents his mistress.

No Place to Run (xxx), on 8 at midnight. An excellent performance by Herschel Bernardi highlights this poignant 1972 drama about a 73-year-old man struggling to retain custody of his adopted grandson. An excellent script also enhances the supporting cast which includes Emmy-winning child star Scott Jacoby, Stephanie Powers, Kay Medford and Tom Bosley.

Johnny Guitar (xxx), on 8 at 1:30. Joan Crawford, Sterling Hayden, Scott Brady and Mercedes McCambridge star in this well-produced 1954 western about a lady owner of a successful gambling house who is resented by the town.

Rulers of the Sea (xxx), on 7 at 1:50. A well-told tale about the first steam crossing of the Atlantic which led to the beginning of the luxury liner, filmed in 1939 with Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Margaret Lockwood and Will Fyfe.

Dragoon Wells Massacre (xx), on 6 at 1:55. Routine 1957 western about a wagon train crossing dangerous Indian territory, starring Barry Sullivan, Mona Freeman and Dennis O'Keefe.

Today's
Highlights

Merv Griffin Show, on 12 at 4:30. Merv's guests today include Liza Minnelli, her father Vincent Minnelli, Sammy Davis Jr., and actress Leslie Caron. (90 mins.)

The Way It Was, on 9 at 8. Football takes the spotlight as the program looks at the 1960 NFL championship game between the Green Bay Packers and the Philadelphia Eagles. Recalling the game are some of the players including Paul Hornung, Jim Taylor and Max McGee. (30 mins.)

No. 9, on 9 at 8:30. War From the Air — a history of the strategic bomber, from the First World War to Vietnam. Using newsreel footage, the documentary focuses on an early advocate of aerial bombing, the Italian general Giulio Douhet. The program also includes a rarely seen 1943 propaganda film by Walt Disney that urged the bombing of Japanese cities. (60 mins.)

Homemade Jam, on 2 and 6 at 8:30. Debut of a three-part musical series spotlighting performers from Alberta, and hosted by Edmonton singer-composer Bob Ruzicka. Tonight: singer-harpist Nancy Nash. (30 mins.)

Look Who's Here, on 2 and 6 at 10. Retirement in Victoria is just one of the many subjects — discussed by Doyle Klyn, former women's editor of Week-end Magazine, in an interview with Toronto Star columnist Gary Lautens. (30 mins.)

CBS News Special, on 7 at 10. Mr. Rooney Goes To Dinner, a satirical essay on eating out in America. The program's gourmet guide is Andrew Rooney, who sampled food, services and prices in 75 restaurants. He also talks about the art of reading menus, choosing wine and understanding waiters' habits. (60 mins.)

All for the Family? on 9 at 10:30. Beginning this fall, the three major U.S. networks will be devoting the early evening hours to programs designed for viewing by the entire family. Just what constitutes acceptable family fare is the subject of this panel discussion. (30 mins.)

Competition Opens For Young Canadian Composers

If you are a young Canadian composer now's the chance to come out of your garret and test the fruits of your labors.

The 1975-76 CBC Radio-Canada Council National Competition for Young Composers is open from now until December 31, 1975, and offers up to $20,000 in prizes.

Originally instituted in 1973 as CBC Radio-Canada Council Awards for Young Composers, the competition is organized by both the French and English Services of CBC Radio, and by the Canada Council, along with the Ontario Arts Council and Le Ministère des Affaires Culturelles du Québec. This year, they have been joined by the British Columbia Cultural Fund.

Entrants must be Canadian citizens or landed immigrants 29 years of age and under by the closing date of the competion (born after December 31, 1945). Landed immigrants must be prepared to submit a document signed by an immigration officer. Works by landed immigrants must have been composed since their arrival in Canada.

Employees of the CBC, Canada Council, British Columbia Cultural Fund, the Ontario Arts Council, or le Ministère des Affaires Culturelles du Québec are not eligible.

First prize is $4,000; with a second prize of $3,500, $3,250 third prize, two fourth national prizes of $3,000 given by the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, a sixth prize of $2,250, and a $1,000 B.C. award for the best work by a B.C. composer. All prizes will be given out at the discretion of the jury.

The works will be judged in the month of January, 1976, by a jury of four members plus a chairman. Two members will be from the Canadian League of Composers, one from the CBC, and one from the Canada Council. The chairman will be chosen jointly by the CBC and the Canada Council.

All the winning works will be recorded for broadcast on CBC Radio some time in 1976.

Brochures will be issued shortly to CBC Regions, and university music departments. They may also be obtained by writing to CBC Radio-Canada Council National Competition for Young Composers, Box 500, Station A, Toronto, Ont. M5W 1E6.

Candidates may submit up to three scores each, for no more than 12 performers plus conductor, and may also employ electronic tape. Compositions may be for electronic tape alone, in which case the tape itself is the entry. Works must be between 12 and 24 minutes in length.

Tapes of performances of any of the works entered can be submitted, and in fact are recommended, with the accompanying score. All tapes should be accompanied by full technical information regarding playback specifications. All tapes and scores will be returned after the competition.

Each candidate must supply the jury with one photocopy of the score. Scores and tapes should be carefully packed and sent by registered mail to The Canadian Music Centre, 4263 Bay St., Toronto, Ont. M5R 2C2, or to Centre de Musique Canadienne, Suite 541, 20050, blvd. St. Joseph est, Bureau 501, Montreal, Quebec H2T 1H7.

Newsman Surveys U.S. Restaurants

CBS News writer-producer Andrew A. Rooney, whose acerbic, entertaining observations of government bureaucracy were recently seen on the CBS News Special Mr. Rooney Goes to Washington, now takes his palate and a film crew to some of America's typical and atypical restaurants, observing in his own special way how Americans eat when they eat out, where they go and why, on Mr. Rooney Goes to Dinner, a CBS News Special to be presented Tuesday, June 24 (10:00-11:00) on the CBS Television Network.

For his candid study of the American way of dining out, Rooney sampled the cuisines of more than 75 restaurants in 12 cities, including Los Angeles, Seattle, Chicago, New York and New Orleans. "They ranged from the most expensive establishments, such as the Palace in New York, where a minimum tab comes to nearly $70 per person, without liquor but including tip, to fast-food chains, a variety of ethnic eateries and 'theme' type restaurants, which feature unusual decors.

What makes customers frequent certain restaurants? Rooney found that the quality of the food was not necessarily the reason. "It's easier to find an acceptable restaurant today than it was, say, ten years ago," he comments, "but it's harder to find a good one. Today, a restaurant can attract as many people because it looks like a pirate ship as it can because it has a good chef."

Today's Highlights

Dinah Shore Show, on 7 at 3:30. Dinah's guests today include Edward Asner (from the MGM show), Pearl Bailey, singer-dancer Melba Moore, syndicated columnist Erma Bombeck, and the 17-year-old winner of the Betty Crocker college scholarship. (90 mins.)

... on 4 at 11:30 p.m.

National Geographic, on 8 at 8. A raft voyage down Idaho's Salmon River with waterway conservationists Frank and John Craighead. Their adventures include banding an eagle, living off the land and visiting a once prosperous gold-mining town. The program also looks at the historic Hudson and Potomac River and Florida's Everglades. (60 mins.)

Feeling Good, on 9 at 8. Obesity is the subject of tonight's episode of this PBS health series, hosted by Dick Cavett. (30 mins.)

The Good Times Are Killing Me, on 9 at 9. A documentary portrait of Louisiana's Cajuns, descendants of French settlers, who dwell mostly in small rural communities and maintain a distinct cultural tradition. The program examines their dialect, customs and music and includes interviews with many of the people. (60 mins.)

Thin Edge, on 9 at 10. Aggression: The Explosive Emotion — a survey of scientific research into the occurrence and causes of aggression in humans and animals. The program includes a study of Eskimos in one Canadian tribe whose outward tranquility is belied by subtle displays of hostility; and the effect of violent television programs on children's behavior. (60 mins.)

Wide World Special, on 4 at 11:30. A comedy retrospective with hosts Milton Berle and guests Flip Wilson, Albert Brooks and Don Adams. The program includes film clips of Amos 'n Andy, W. C. Fields, the Marx Brothers, Don Rickles, Jack Benny, Eddie Adams, Barbara Feldon, and Irving Benson, who played Berle's comic foil at the Hollywood Palace. (90 mins.)

Movies

The Street With No Name (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. An exciting 1948 semi-documentary about the FBI that follows the story of an undercover agent who joins a crime ring, starring Richard Widmark, Lloyd Nolan and Mark Stevens.

Fear Strikes Out (xxx), on 11 at 1. Anthony Perkins gives a fine performance in this outstanding 1957 drama about baseball great Jim Piersall, and the pressures that led to his mental breakdown. Equally excellent is Karl Malden as Piersall's pushy father.

Knock on Wood (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. A treat for Danny Kaye fans is this entertaining 1954 musical-comedy about a ventriloquist up to his neck in international adventure and intrigue. The talented actress-turned-director Mai Zetterling adds to the fun.

Only With Married Men (xx), on 4 at 8:30. A familiar cast of TV faces (Michele Lee, David Birney, Don DeLuise, Judy Carne, John Astin and Gavin MacLeod) highlights this 1974 light-

ANTHONY PERKINS

... on 11 at 1 p.m.

SUSAN HAYWARD

... on 8 at midnight

weight comedy about a single woman who will date only married men, and the swinging bachelor who poses as a philandering husband in order to woo her.

Diary of a Mad Housewife (xxx), on 8 at 9. An excellent, perceptive dissection of a modern marriage, starring Richard Benjamin and Carrie Snodgrass as Jonathan and Tina Balser, a social-climbing lawyer and his socially apathetic wife. Their world is filled with the right people, the right things and the right parties — a chic New York social scene that is inspiring him, repelling her and leading to marital disaster. This 1970 film won an Oscar nomination for Miss Snodgrass.

The Buccaneer (xxx), on 11 at 9. Anthony Quinn directed and Cecil B. DeMille produced this lavish, big-scale 1958 adventure saga about pirate Jean Lafitte's role in the War of 1812. A large cast includes Yul Brynner, Charlton Heston, Claire Bloom, Inger Stevens and Charles Boyer.

To the Shores of Hell (x), on 12 at 11:30. An awful 1965 Vietnam War drama, about a Marine major struggling to rescue his doctor brother from the Vietcong, starring Marshall Thompson and Richard Arlen.

The Red Shoes (xxx), on 2 at midnight. (Part 1) Beautiful set design and superb dancing overcomes the melodramatic aspects of a hackneyed plot about an impresario who persuades a ballerina to give up her romance with a composer and sacrifice all for art, in this 1948 British-produced drama starring Moira Shearer and Anton Walbrook. (Shown in two parts, with the conclusion tomorrow at the same time.)

Laughing Anne, on 6 at midnight. No rating available on this 1954 English-made drama about a singer who travels to the South Seas with her lover, only to fall in love with a schooner captain, starring Margaret Lockwood, Forrest Tucker and Wendell Corey.

Showdown (xx), on 7 at midnight. Audie Murphy, Kathleen Crowley and Charles Drake star in this standard 1963 western about a pair of drifters imprisoned with outlaws, who are forced to hand over some stolen bonds.

Say Goodbye, Maggie Cole (xxx), on 8 at midnight. The late Susan Hayward gives an excellent performance in this 1972 made-for-television drama, about a recently widowed doctor who goes back into practice to try and forget her sorrow. An equally competent supporting cast includes Darren McGavin, Michael Constantine and Beverly Garland.

Kid Dynamite, on 8 at 1:30. No rating available on this 1943 drama starring Leo Gorcey as the champion boxer of the East Side Kids who is kidnapped by thugs just before the big fight. Huntz Hall and Bobby Jordan co-star.

The Big Broadcast of 1937 (xxx), on 7 at 1:30. An entertaining 1936 musical built around the talents of radio and movie personalities of the day, including Jack Benny, Bob Burns, Gracie Allen, George Burns, Martha Raye, Ray Milland, Benny Goodman and his band and Leopold Stokowski and his Orchestra. A field day for nostalgia fans.

Pursuit Across the Desert (x), on 6 at 1:55. A 1961 Mexican-produced western with the cast dubbed into English.

BBC Creates TV News Program for Children

By
ANTHONY THORNCROFT
London

More than five million British children, aged around 11, have been settling down on many a recent evening to tea, their television sets — and pictures of the upheaval in Vietnam, military preparations in the Middle East or some other grim crisis that the frenzied world of their parents is struggling through.

This dose of reality — significantly sweetened, to be sure — is a BBC-TV program called Newsround, and it is one of the few telecasts of news anywhere in the world that is aimed specifically at children. Not surprisingly, Newsround has attracted wide interest among TV professionals and has been studied by a number of European television services.

The program is telecast four evenings a week for six months of the year. It lasts from six to 10 minutes and is crammed with film clips of current news stories, geared to a child's viewpoint. Although news events of a sometimes gruesome nature may be included on the program, they are afforded only a minute or two and the most optimistic slant is provided. When a jet crashed in Nairobi recently, Newsround mentioned the number of persons who survived rather than the number killed. And when a man went berserk in Torquay in the southwest of England and killed several people, Newsround merely said that he had "shot" them. There tend to be angry letters from parents if the items become too "adult." (An estimated million Newsround viewers are adults — mainly housewives and old people.)

New Formula

Children do not like watching television news — or so BBC audience research studies found year after year, until 1972. But Derek Amoores, head of News, thought the right formula could change all that. Since 1971, BBC children's television had been running a program called Search, which brought youngsters into the studio to discuss such matters as school uniforms or UFO's or the problems of handicapped children. John Craven, a former newspaper reporter from Leeds, was the moderator on Search. When 12 pilot Newsround programs were launched in 1972, Craven was the natural choice as anchorman.

Today, Craven is inextricably identified with Newsround and to a great extent sets the tone for the program. He is a 34-year-old Yorkshireman, with a hard, authoritative and quite classless voice. There is not a hint of talking-down in his approach — perhaps because he has little previous experience in the often in-bred world of children's television. He was working as a regional news reporter for BBC television in Bristol and got the Search job through popping into the studio by chance while the auditions were taking place.

Craven's approach — short, sharp snippets of news delivered in a flat, unemotional, direct manner — owes more to American newscasts rather than to the more rambling style favored by most British news commentators. At the outset of each program, Craven appears and reads the latest news bulletins, with quick switches to film coverage; he reappears between each item and there are occasional interviews in the studio or feature segments with him looking at, say, a very old Bible or a new invention. But few of the items last as long as two minutes; the over-all effect is one of an efficient, fast-paced newscast.

Along with editor Jill Roach, Craven has complete control over the content of the program, which is mainly devoted to the day's major news events — no matter how horrific they may be. Few words are banned; "guerrilla," "terrorist" and the like crop up regularly on the program. But a word such as "inflation" is not used, because Craven believes children would not understand its meaning.

There are obvious differences between the news items on Newsround and on the evening newscasts aimed at an adult audience. On the international side, for example, all the main news events will probably be covered, but discretion will be used in the pictures transmitted. Reporters might talk about famine — but there will be no shots of dead children. It is the same with wars: no close-ups of the action or bloody reports.

Adventure

A good example of the Newsround approach was its recent coverage of a New Orleans shoot-out between a man who went berserk and the local police. On the late-night BBC news report, film (from an American news service) was shown of a policeman running across a roof and then falling, presumably shot down by the gunman. When the Newsround staff was sorting out a clip for that day's program, it kept the film running and discovered that the man scrambled up again and was not badly hurt. For the adults, suggestion of the worst; for the children, the actual happier ending.

Craven reckons that children are much less interested in strikes and inflation than they are in events in foreign countries. A recent Newsround included items on Vietnamese refugees and the assassination of King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, as well as so-called soft items like a talking wheelchair developed in California, a man who was pushing a piano from London to Wales and the trans-Alaska sledge race.

Newsround usually has a running story that is covered from show to show. The running story of last season concerned a kangaroo that had escaped in Chicago. Newsround built the kangaroo into a cult figure, keeping an intrigued audience posted on the latest developments. There is also a concentration on adventure stories — because Craven likes adventure stories. So the sailing of the replica Golden Hind to America is given steady attention. On the other hand, there is surprisingly little coverage given to sports, perhaps because, in Craven's estimation, girls find the subject boring.

Newsround is an idiosyncratic program. It gets, as Craven puts it, "keen" on things. It was keen on the kangaroo; it has always been keen on Eskimos; and because Craven and Mrs. Roach liked some German news film about the Kurds, Newsround was keen on the Kurdish War and has given it much more extensive coverage over recent months than have other BBC news programs.

Newsround has its own reporter, Rees Jones, and a camera crew that films much of the footage shown on the program, but it relies heavily on the co-operation of BBC news teams and the availability of interesting snippets from overseas. Each day Mrs. Roach attends all the conferences of the BBC's news teams and views the films sent in by the BBC's own foreign reporters and also that of overseas companies like CBS and ABC.

Difficulty

Newsround's major difficulty is that it falls into the children's programming empire while relying on the news department for its content. An unsympathetic news producer may object to Newsround having first bite at film that will, about half an hour later, be featured as the main item on the BBC's national early-evening news program. Nonetheless the youngsters often know what's happening in the world before their parents do.

The Newsround staff members would hate to have the broadcast considered educational. They prefer to believe that youngsters watch because they enjoy looking in rather than because they feel they have to. Newsround has no tie-ins with schools or with the educational programs of the BBC. It is simply a news service for children; nothing fancier.

CARRIE SNODGRASS won an Oscar nomination for her excellent performance in the 1970 movie, Diary of a Mad Housewife, about a New York couple caught up in a superficial social life, to be telecast on Wednesday at 9 p.m. on Channel 8.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC DOCUMENTARY — A naturalist risks the rapids on a trip down the Salmon River — a waterway relatively unmolested by man —in this scene from the National Geographic documentary, Wild River, to be telecast on Wednesday at 8 p.m. on Channel 8.

Today's
Highlights

Luncheon Date, on 2 at noon. Guests on today's show, host Elwood Glover's second to last, are comic Don Rickles and film Director Norman Jewison. (60 mins.)

My Wife Next Door, on 3 at 7. Debut of a new BBC comedy series about a couple who agree to a trial divorce only to discover that they have taken adjoining cottages in the country. John Alderton and Hannah Gordon star. (30 mins.)

The Music of Robert Farnon, on 2 and 6 at 8. Soprano Barbara Shuttlesworth, violinist Steven Staryk, and members of the National Ballet of Canada join composer-conductor Robert Farnon in a concert of his works and arrangements. In an interview, Farnon recalls his early days with Percy Faith and the CBC radio show The Happy Gang. (60 mins.)

In Search of a Maestro, on 9 at 8. Highlights from an eight-day contest held last year, which features 20 aspiring musicians performing in the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra's first young conductor competition. (60 mins.)

Texas Wheelers, on 4 at 8:30. Return for the summer of last season's comedy series about an itinerant rascal (Jack Elam) and his fiercely independent kids. (30 mins.)

Hollywood Television Theatre, on 9 at 9. Man of Destiny, first in a weekly series of repeat dramas from this popular series. The comedy, written by George Bernard Shaw, tells about the young general Napoleon Bonaparte and a mystery woman who steals important dispatches intended for him. Starring are Stacy Keach, Samatha Eggar and William Basset. (60 mins.)

Maclear, on 8 at 9:30. The Venetian Affair, with host-correspondent Michael Maclear examining how attempts are being made to restore the art treasures and face of old Venice while the city's industrial suburbs — which cause the pollution and decay — are being ignored. (30 mins.)

Male Menopause, on 9 at 10. Humorous and dramatic sketches combine with plain talk for this special report that looks at the anxieties of the middle-aged man. Host William Windom is joined by comedienne actress Anne Mearns and folk singer Oscar Brand. (60 mins.)

Wide World Special, on 4 at 11:30. A Salute to Daytime Drama — featuring clips from past and present soap operas. Interviews with daytime drama performers, and a panel discussion with psychologists who discuss the ardent followers of the daily dramas. (90 mins.)

Movies

Scudda - Hoo! Scudda - Hay! (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A down-on-the-farm comedy-drama about a youngster who gets hold of a pair of neglected mules, then trains them to be the best team around. Filmed in 1945 with Lon McCallister, June Haver and Walter Brennan.

Across the Wide Missouri (xx), on 11 at 1. Clark Gable has little to do but look strong and brave in this slow-moving 1951 adventure saga about trail blazing in the Rocky Mountains during the days of the fur trappers.

That's My Boy (xx), on 5 at 1:30. A 1951 Dean Martin-Jerry Lewis comedy about a pompous sports hero athlete who tries to improve the physique and ability of his anemic son. The plot suffers from a hammering repetition of gags, is primarily for Martin and Lewis fans.

The Specialists, on 3 at 8. No rating available on this 1975 made-for-TV drama about the inner workings of an epidemic-control center, and the doctors assigned to locate carriers of communicable diseases. Segments of this film were filmed on-location at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Georgia.

... on 7 at 9 p.m.

The Movie Maker, on 7 at 9. No rating available on this 1967 Rod Serling drama about a struggle between a once-successful movie mogul, and a new regime of young filmmakers and actors. Originally shown on the Bob Hope Television Theatre series, and starring Rod Steiger, Sally Kellerman and Robert Culp. (Although I don't have a rating, I would guess by the cast that it's probably good — Ed.)

Merrill's Marauders (xxxx), on 11 at 9. A splendid 1962 film that tells the story of the famous outfit of war-hardened veterans who battled the enemy in Burma under excruciating conditions calling for the limit of human endurance. Realistic, tough with fine performances by Jeff Chandler, Ty Hardin, Will Hutchins and Claude Akins.

Target Risk, on 5 at 9:30. No rating available on this 1975 made-for-TV drama about a gem courier forced to participate in a jewel robbery to ransom his kidnapped girlfriend, starring Bo Svenson, Meredith Baxter and Keenan Wynn.

The Slender Thread (xxx), on 12 at 9:30. Sidney Poitier and Anne Bancroft are excellent in this gripping 1965 drama about a volunteer worker trying to trace a telephone call from a woman who has taken an overdose of drugs.

Judith (xx), on 12 at 11:30. A poor script hampers a good cast (Peter Finch, Jack Hawkins and Sophia Loren) in this 1966 melodrama about an Austrian Jewess helping the Israeli underground track her ex-husband, who betrayed her to the Nazis.

Red Shoes (xxx), on 2 at midnight. (Conclusion) A 1948

ANNE BANCROFT
... on 12 at 9:30 p.m.

ballet drama, starring Moira Shearer and Anton Walbrook. (See Wednesday movies for details.)

Pawnee, on 6 at midnight. No rating available on this 1957 western about a white man, raised by an Indian chief, who is caught in the middle of an Indian-settler clash, starring George Montgomery and Lola Albright.

I Saw What You Did (xx), on 7 at midnight. An interesting 1965 suspense melodrama about a pair of teen-age girls who play a telephone prank which unwittingly involves them in a murder. The two youngsters are the stars, with John Ireland as the murderer and Joan Crawford wasted in a small role.

Two for the Money (xx), on 8 at midnight. The supporting cast (Walter Brennan, Mercedes McCambridge and Neville Brand) outline the headlines (Robert Hooks and Stephen Brooks) in this 1972 made-for-TV crime-drama about a pair of ex-cops who open up a private detective agency.

Dakota (xx), on 8 at 1:30. A routine 1945 John Wayne western with the Duke coming to the aid of wheat farmers being swindled by crooked landgrabbers.

Somewhere in the Night, on 6 and 1:10. No rating available on this 1946 mystery about an amnesiac who runs into murder while trying to regain his memory, starring John Hodiak, Lloyd Nolan and Richard Conte.

The General Died at Dawn (xxx), on 7 at 1:40. Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll star in this exciting 1936 adventure story about an American soldier of fortune in China trying to save a community from a cruel war lord (Akim Tamiroff).

CLARK GABLE is at his rough and romantic best in the great outdoor adventure, Across the Wide Missouri, to be telecast on Thursday at 1 p.m. on Channel 11. Filmed in the magnificent Colorado Rockies, this drama, based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, was a full year in the making, and co-stars John Hodiak and Ricardo Montalban.

THE TEXAS WHEELERS—an offbeat comedy series about an unconventional Texas family headed by Jack Elam (right) and Gary Busey, returns to television for a summer run, beginning on Thursday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 4. The series includes six new episodes, not aired last season.

Report Examines Male Menopause

William Windom hosts a one-hour documentary on the middle-aged crisis of mind and body when The Male Menopause: The Pause That Perplexes returns to Channel 9, June 26 at 10:00 p.m. Windom will be joined by actress-comedienne Anne Meara and folksinger Oscar Brand.

Before 1900, most men were not supposed to live past age 48. Now, most well-adjusted American men between the ages of 35 and 55 go through a change of life. This change, not as physiological as the female menopause, is a time of re-evaluation and personal stress arising out of the pressures and attitudes of American culture.

The show, addresses the questions of youth, sexuality, work, male-female relationships and health as they relate to the middle-aged male. The format of the show includes an attitudinal quiz, an investigation of the cosmetic industry and the pursuit of eternal youth, folk songs, group encounter sessions, and comedy skits. Each section of the show contributes to the destruction of myths and to the re-evaluation of true facts about middle age.

MACLEAR SERIES VISITS VENICE

Correspondent Michael Maclear travelled to Venice for the next repeat episode of Maclear, titled The Venetian Affair, airing Thursday, June 26, 9:30-10:00 p.m. on the CTV Television Network.

The Venetian Affair is a visual essay on what Michael Maclear calls man's obsessive and destructive love affair with the past at the expense of the present.

Maclear sees Venice as symbolizing misdirected concern over conservation and the environment. Hundreds of millions of dollars and unprecedented international effort is currently expended to restore the art treasures and facade of old Venice, while, paradoxically, the city's industrial suburbs which are the cause of the pollution and decay, "the everyday city," as Maclear puts it, are ignored.

USSR Agrees To U.S. TV Deal

A further step in an exchange of entertainment news and sports television and radio programs in 1975 between the USSR State Committee for Television and Radio and the American Broadcasting Companies, Inc., was taken with the announcement of several specific projects. The new accord follows the general agreement reached in Moscow last November 1 between ABC and the Soviet Television and Radio Committee, TSS.

The announcement was made by Elton H. Rule, President, American Broadcasting Companies, Inc., and two officials of the USSR State Committee for Television and Radio, Alexandre Evstafiev, Deputy Chairman, and Lev Korolev, Director of Foreign Relations.

A highlight of the program exchange will be an unprecedented three-hour special telecast on live in the USSR which will occupy an entire evening of prime time on the ABC Television Network.

Also, two ABC Television Network programs, the early-morning AM America, and the late-night Wide World of Entertainment, will produce programs in the Soviet Union this year for presentation in their respective time periods. The State Teleradio of the USSR is assisting ABC News in its preparation and production of a special documentary to be shown in advance of the joint experimental Soyuz-Apollo space flight. This first joint American-Russian space mission is scheduled for July 15, with the landing set for July 24.

In the area of sports, the long-standing co-operative relationship between ABC and the TSS will go forward, resulting in a continuing exchange of athletic event telecasts in the future.

ABC will give the State Teleradio of the USSR assistance in the filming of a television program about the United States.

According to the terms of the reciprocal agreement, ABC and the State Teleradio of the USSR will exchange television programs concerning events in the United States and the USSR which deal with science, culture, technical progress and sports in the two countries.

There will be an exchange of excerpts of radio shows, dealing with life both in the United States and the Soviet Union, musical programs and other events.

The two parties also agree to give assistance wherever possible to their news correspondents accredited in the United States and the Soviet Union.

Music Special Focuses On Aspiring Conductors

In Search of a Maestro, a special documentary on the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra's first Young Conductors Competition, will be shown June 26 at 8:00 p.m. on KCTV-9.

This hour-long program follows the final 20 contestants, chosen from 80 competitors from all over the country, through an eight-day series of written tests and performances, including the preparation and direction of well-known works from classical, romantic and modern repertoires. The competitors are also required to recognize and correct mistakes specifically written into orchestral parts.

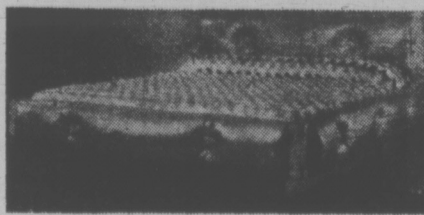

Viewers get a close look at the tremendous talent and poise these young musicians exhibit in this rare and important opportunity in their careers.

The program is narrated by the competition judges, including Sergiu Comissiona, the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra musical director who personally put up the $2,000 cash award.

Concluding the show is the winner conducting the full orchestra in concert, featuring the symphony's associate conductor, Leon Fleisher, playing Ravel's Piano Concerto for Left Hand.

Today's Highlights

Luncheon Dale, on 2 at noon. Elwood Glover reminisces about his 12 years as this program's host, in the last show of the series. (90 mins.)

Dinah Shore Show, on 7 at 3:30. Dinah's guests today include actor Warren Beatty, Nanette Fabray, singer Kenny Rogers and comic Martin Mull. (90 mins.)

Mike Douglas Show, on 12 at noon and 7 at 6:30. This week's show is being taped from New Jersey's Great Adventure safari park, with Mike's co-host George Hamilton and guests Kirk Douglas, dancer-actress Juliet Prowse and naturalist Roger Caras. (30 mins.)

Hurtin' Songs, on 2 and 6 at 9. A music special featuring country-style blues songs with host Cliff Edwards, and guests Lynn Jones, Dick Dameron, Louise Rockwood, Linda Brown, Nancy Simons, Rick Fielding and the Canadian singing group Zephyr. (60 mins.)

Comedy Pilot, on 4 at 9:30. How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, a pilot for a possible series, inspired by the Broadway hit. The story focuses on a window washer determined to clean up in the business world, even if it means starting from the bottom, and stars Alan Bursky. (30 mins.)

ABC News Closeup, on 4 at 10. A report on U.S. food policies, which, according to this program's producer, "have intensified the hunger crisis abroad and led to higher prices for the American farmer and shopper." The report features interviews with U.S. government officials, agricultural experts and economists. (60 mins.)

Tax Bargains in Art, on 9 at 10. An examination of U.S. publicly funded art programs. (60 mins.)

Johnny Carson Show, on 5 at 11:30. Guests tonight include naturalist Euell Gibbons and actress-comedienne Nanette Fabray. (90 mins.)

Midnight Special, on 5 at 1. A salute to Leon Russell and a "Rock Rap" segment with Carol Wayne highlights tonight's pop music concert with The Temptations, British rock singer Leo Sayer, country-rock artist Jessi Colter, rock group Ace, and soul singer Sister Rose (Sly Stone's sister). (90 mins.)

Movies

The Outcast (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. A better-than-average western drama, starring John Derek as a young man returning to Colorado intending to claim a ranch from his uncle which he thinks is rightfully his. Filmed in 1954.

Black Gold (x), on 11 at 1. Routine 1963 adventure-drama about oil prospecting in 1920s Oklahoma, starring Philip Carey and Diane McBain.

The Lion (xx), on 5 at 3:30. Gorgeous African scenery highlights this otherwise muddled 1962 drama about an American lawyer who comes to Africa to see his remarried wife and their daughter. A weak script and poor direction mars the performances of William Holden, Trevor Howard, Capucine, and Pamela Franklin.

Captain Nemo and the Underwater City (xx), on 7 at 8. A 1970 variation on the Jules Verne classic, starring Robert Ryan as Captain Nemo, whose underwater empire is visited by shipwrecked people. This one should keep the kids entertained.

WILLIAM HOLDEN
... on 5 at 3:30 p.m.

ETHEL MERMAN
... on 12 at 9:30 p.m.

The War of the Worlds (xxx), on 11 at 1. A fascinating 1953 science-fiction thriller highlighted by magnificent, imaginative special effects. The simple plot revolves around an invasion of earth by Mars, but the interest lies in the magic created by special effects wizardry. A must for sci-fi fans.

Call Me Madam (xxx), on 12 at 9:30. Ethel Merman recreates her role in this 1953 film version of the smash Broadway musical about the free-wheeling Washington "hostess with the mostess". The production is colorful, the tunes are fine, and Merman fans will not be disappointed.

Shaft (xxx), on 7 at 9:30. Richard Roundtree plays the title role of a black detective hired to rescue the kidnapped daughter of a Harlem narcotics czar in this 1971 crime-drama, that spawned two sequels, and won an Academy Award for Isaac Hayes, who wrote the music.

Don't Go Near the Water, (xx), on 12 at 11:30. A fast-paced 1957 service comedy about the goings-on in a South Pacific naval installation, starring Glenn Ford and Anne Francis.

Sorority Kill, on 4 at 11:30. A made-for-TV mystery about three fugitives who hold a group of people at gunpoint in a sorority house. The cast is unfamiliar.

The Twonky (x), on 6 at midnight. A silly 1953 farce-fantasy about a college professor who creates a human-like robot, starring Hans Conreid.

Dead Man's Eyes, on 7 at midnight. No rating available on this 1944 mystery about an artist blinded by a jealous model, who is implicated in her murder. Lon Chaney stars.

The Magnetic Monster (x), on 8 at midnight. A 1953 science-fiction tale about scientists trying to destroy a dangerous radioactive substance, starring Richard Carlson.

The Killer Shrews (x), on 7 at 1:20. A slap-dash, low-budget 1959 science-fiction thriller.

Home for the Holidays (xx), on 8 at 1:30. A 1972 made-for-television mystery-thriller about a family reunion disrupted by murder, starring Eleanor Parker, Sally Field, Julie Harris and Walter Brennan. The cast is good but the plot uses also the standard tricks to convey suspense.

... on 7 at 9:30 p.m.

Support Your Local Gunfighter (xx), on 6 at 1:45. James Garner and Suzanne Pleshette star in this 1971 comedy-western about a con man mistaken for a notorious outlaw.

Handel Opera On Tuesday Night

Handel's enchanting love story of Acis and Galatea, which was performed at this year's Guelph Spring Festival, will be shared with the rest of Canada June 24 on CBC Radio.

The charming opera unites four singing stars with the Festival Singers of Canada and Stratford Festival Ensemble under the baton of Nicholas Goldschmidt, renowned artistic director of the Guelph Spring Festival. The performance will be heard on CBC Tuesday Night, June 24, 8:03 p.m. on CBC-AM, and in luxurious stereo on Encore, Thursday, June 26, 8:03 p.m. on CBC-FM.

The text by John Bay is based on a tale from the Latin Metamorphoses by Ovid. Soprano Sheila Barnes stars as Galatea, a sea nymph in love with Acis, a shepherd, sung by tenor Jonathan Rigg. Ms. Barnes, who was a Metropolitan Opera regional finalist, is the daughter-in-law of John Barnes, head of CBC-TV Music. Both she and Jonathan Rigg, who first sang Acis in Brussels, are winners of numerous music scholarships.

The love of the young couple is destroyed by the giant Polyphemus, who, out of desire for Galatea, slays her gentle Acis. The rugged giant is portrayed by well-known Canadian opera, musical comedy and drama star Don McManus.

Although Polyphemus kills her lover, Galatea calls upon the divine powers to transform her murdered lover into an immortal god.

Rounding out the cast is soprano Eleanor Calbes as Damon. Originally from the Philippines, M/s. Calbes toured with the Bayanihan Philippine Dance Co. She has sung various roles with the Canadian Opera Company, appeared on Broadway, and given CBC broadcasts.

Acis and Galatea bears an important place in the realm of opera and oratorio. As an example of fine and inspired craftsmanship, it has remained beloved as one of Handel's major works.

Although it was first performed as a "pastorale" about 1718, the composer revised it in 1732 as a "serenata" when Thomas Augustine Arne, a rival composer, planned to present the work. Handel's version had no staging, but by dressing the chorus and soloists in appropriate costume against painted scenery, he appealed to devotees of both opera and oratorio. The success of this venture inspired Handel to go on to even greater musical heights with such masterpieces as Messiah.

The CBC Radio broadcast was produced by James Kent.
